Executive's Wife Slain

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (AP) — The wife of prominent businessman H. Bruce Palmer was stabbed to death by a tall, dark intruder who invaded the bedroom of her country home near here.

Police warned neighbors in the rich residential area to lock their doors while they sought the unknown man who fled after killing Mrs. Dorothy Palmer, 57, and threatening a maid. His shirt was bloody and he carried a knife.

Palmer, on a business trip to Cape Cod, Mass., returned immediately to the home near New Vernon in a region of estates amid the wooded New Jersey hills 30 miles west of New York City.

Mrs. Palmer had driven to Madison, about three miles away, to pick up the maid, Mrs. Mary Varieri, this morning. The house apparently was left unlocked.

Soon after the two women returned to the house the maid heard screams from upstairs. She told police she ran upstairs to see the prowler dragging Mrs. Palmer out a beedroom.

The man threatened to "kill everybody," the maid said, then fled through a window.

The maid ran screaming from the house and flagged a passing car, whose driver took her to a neighboring home to call police.

About 25 state troopers joined local police in searching the woods where the slayer was last seen.

Family Tries Patience, Kindness, Hospitality when Skunk Calls in Basement

(By Barbara Lacy)

I know. One lives in my basement.

He's there because city officials, my husband and I decided that being hospitable was the most sensible approach.

Here's how it happened:

1:28 a.m. I'm awakened by strange noises in the house. I immediately wake up my husband.

1:30 a.m. Husband tells me to go back to sleep. He says it is only my imagination.

1:31 a.m. Husband also hears strange noises, and reluctantly decides to search the house, with a wooden candlestick held aloft in his right hand.

1:44 a.m. Husband rules out all possible causes of the noises, except for the possibility of an animal or prowler in the basement.

1:45 a.m. Husband decides to take his chances, and returns to bed.

1:48 a.m. Husband heads toward the basement stairs, armed same as at 1:31 a.m.

1:56 a.m. Husband makes a tour of basement and again decides noises were only in his wife's imagination. As husband begins to return upstairs, he notices a small black and shite striped rodent sneaking by the furnace. Husband diagnoses the problem there is a skunk in the basement.

2:01 a.m. After discussing which plans of action, we decided to telephone the fire department, in accomodating manner suggests that removing skunks is more in the line of duty of the police department.

2:12 a.m. Rather than disturb the police or the skunk at this hour, husband and I decide to close all doors leading to the basement. We tip-toe back to bed.

7:21 a.m. Husband groggily, makes his second tour of the basement. The skunk is still there, now hiding under the stairs. By now we are both tip-toeing and talking in whispers as if there was a new baby in the house.

9:15 a.m. I telephone the police department and explain the problem. Actually I don't want them to shoot the skunk, and I certainly don't want them to agitate or irritate the skunk, who I have now named Oliver.

9:25 a.m. Police and humane officer arrive. After a conference and cautious trip to the basement, they decided that rather than escalate the battle, and take the risk that the skunk might retaliate, we should leave the basement door open and eventually the skunk will get hungry and leave on his own.

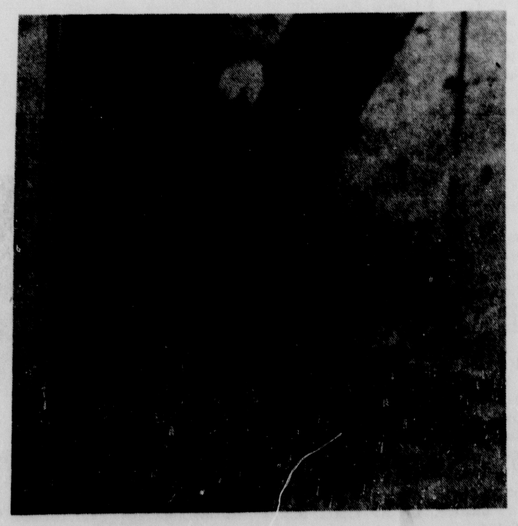
5:05 p.m. Husband arrives home from work. A quick tour of the basement answers the question, Oliver is still there. By now we are getting accustomed to his stripes, and our thinking has changed from how to remove Oliver, to how to make the best of his plans to take up permanent accomodations.

I look up skunks in a reference book, and discover that they live in dens and burrows and are chiefly nocturnal, preying upon small rodents, birds, reptiles and insects. Gee, I think to myself, no more crickets in the house. Of course the book also mentions that skunks sometimes project to a distance of several feet a powerful acrid fluid with an exceedingly offensive odor.

6:30 p.m. After a family conference, it's decided. Oliver can stay, providing he minds his manners, and maintains respectful habits of personal hygiene. My husband serves him a bowl of milk, and several leftovers from dinner. Naturally the basement door is always open, and if Oliver decides to leave us there will be no ill will and hopefully no ill wind.



Skunk peers from beneath basement steps. . . takes a walk. . . Searches for way out.

A SEASON TO ENJOY

Throughout the United States, fall is one of the most pleasant times of the year. It is the time of Indian Summer -- a period of calm before the coming of winter. Fall is also the time of red hats and hunters. Thanks to state game laws, and the conservation efforts of many agencies, from the federal level down to the individual wood lot owner, there is plenty of game, and millions of acres of forests, plains, and mountains for hunters to roam.

The game and the beauty of the countryside will be with us in perpetuity, if hunters and recreationists will be content to enjoy, but not abuse the natural assets placed at their disposal. Courtesy, common sense, care and willingness to abide the rules -- don't be a game hog or a careless camper -- will insure good hunting and a pleasant time for all.

Congress is behaving like a political animal not an economic animal in refusing to vote a tax increase.

There is more agreement among economists than usually prevails that an inflationary exists and that the economy is again heating up dangerously as a result of the pressures entailed in fighting a war abroad and attempting to expand domestic social services at the same time at home.

Without doubt interest rates will push higher and living costs advance more rapidly if Congress does not accept advice from both within and without the Johnson administration to apply brakes to the surging economy by applying a tax increase.

A lot of politics is involved in the delay.

Republicans in Congress contend logically enough that the administration should cut back domestic spending. This is not an inconsistent position but so much of the Great Society program already has been approved and put into being that little can be done now to stem the tide.

The American people asked for it and they must pay for it.

There isn't any doubt that the people are alarmed about taxes and are reluctant to pay more.

This is a human trait but it is not a logical position.

The masses stand to lose the most by the inflation that a failure to raise taxes will unleash.

The tax increase in the cold light of today's realities is necessary.

Political ineptitude and reluctance to act created the near money panic of 1966.

With this fresh in mind it is strange that Congress is willing to sit on its hands now.

Congress should act in the public interest by passing a bill applying a broad tax increase bill applying to both individuals and corporations.

up deficiences in training of some National Guard units proved the necessity both of maintaining and strengthening them.

President Lyndon B. Johnson, who slowly has come around to deploring anarchy instead of chanting "we shall overcome", told one reason why in his Kansas City speech to peace officers.

He said that the federal government has fewer policemen than the nation's largest city.

Who then is there to maintain order on the home front when this country's armed forces are engaged abroad?

It is the National Guard.

The American people can thank Congress for resisting Secretary of Defense McNamara's persistent efforts to cut back the National Guards. That is just another one of the numerous things on which McNamara has been wrong.

Some Guard units performed admirably this summer. Others were inept but this country has never experienced any riots like those of this summer and the Guards had no effective training or experience with which to cope with the problems.

The problems were aggravated by cowardly public officials, who tried to mount a law enforcement campaign after rioting and looting had gone uncontrolled for days and snipers had plenty of time to secret themselves in strategic locations.

The major responsibility for this anarchy lies with these public officials -- President Johnson, governors and mayors -- rather than the occasionally erratic and untrained young Guardsmen.

The error is being corrected. Guardsmen now are being trained for riot duty.

It remains to be seen whether public officials will have the courage to use them in time when next time they are needed.

THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN REGRETS

At the end of Motel, one of the three short plays that comprise America Hurrah, a young couple enter a motel room. Then as Robert Brustein described it in The New Republic (Dec. 3, 1966), they "turn on the TV and, to the accompaniment of wild rock-and-roll, go about the cheerful destruction of the room: ripping off the toilet seat, breaking the bed springs, pulling down doors and windows, scrawling obscenities and pornographic rawings with lipstick on the walls, and finally tearing the motel keeper apart, head and all."

The couple will be slightly better behaved when America Hurrah opens at the Vaudeville Theater in London's West End on Thursday, Sept. 21. Presumably they will continue to wreck the premises and the proprietor, but oscenity and pornography are out. The Lord Chamberlain has so decreed.

The Lord Chamberlain is Britain's stage censor. His powers date from the Licensing Act of 1737 and the Theatres Act of 1843. He may forbid the acting of any play on public stage (but not club theatres) whenever he determines that "it is fitting for the preservation of good manners, decorum, or of the public peace to do so." Obscenity and unflattering references to the royal family are considered bad manners by the Lord Chamberlain.

A joint committee of Parliament recommended last July that the Lord Chamberlain be stripped of his censorship powers. Lord Cobbold, the incumbent Lord Chamberlain, welcomed the proposal. However, similar reports were drawn up in 1865 and 1909 and got nowhere. In 1949, a bill to abolish stage censorship got as far as second reading in the House of Commons, but no farther. Just as there'll always be an England, there may always be a Lord Chamberlain also.

NEW YORK (AP) — Life is a collector's game.

Everybody has to play the game, whether he wants to or not. The problem is— what to collect? Shall it be stamps or dolls, wounds or portraits of old windmills, bruises or money?

There are hundreds of choices. So many, many things to collect. But there is one thing you can't go though this world without collecting— memories. And nothing else man collects is so precious to him.

Your own collection is pretty extensive if you can look back and remember when—

TRAVEL-TIME TIPS:

Here's the best way to pack slacks: Place them on a flat surface and smooth out wrinkles. Then start rolling them, fairly tight, from the waisteband. When rolled like this, they will not only stay in better shape, but can be packed away against the side or top of a bag and take but little space . . . A rolled-up piece of cardboard, with a rubberband around it, will protect a hairbrush, toothpaste tube or anything else from being crushed in packing.

EASY DOES IT

IT HAD BEEN STRESSED to the instructor of airborne troops that the psychological approach was of utmost importance. "Above all," his superiors cautioned him, "don't do or say anything that might cause sudden fright to trainees."

Thus, when one engine conked out on a flight and another began smoking badly, the instructor strove for nonchalance as he adjusted his parachute on his way to the hatch door.

"Now I want you men to keep perfectly calm," he said, "while I go for help."

WE MUST BUY WHAT-WAS-IT?

The head of a big advertising agency has disclosed that television tycoons will soon experiment with fewer but longer commercials.

Conceding for the sake of argument that television commercials CAN be longer than some of them seem to be now, it is interesting to contemplate the potentials of the proposed three-minute or even 10-minute -- yes, 10-MINUTE -- air plug.

A homemade survey indicates that a reasonably agile television viewer can in three minutes hoist himself out of his chair, waddle briskly to the kitchen, open the icebox door, make a quick inventory of what he sees, grab enough food and drink to sustain him for another hour, and be back in his seat by the time the movie of the night is resumed.

In a 10-minute commercial spot, the same viewer can do all of the above, make a phone call, splash a little water on his face to keep him awake, and maybe even have time to ask his wife where their teen-age kids is before pop has to be back on duty in front of The Set.

Now the average television viewer is going to appreciate this and have a warm feeling for the advertiser who so thoughtfully allows him so much time to regroup himself for further viewing.

The customer relationship may, in fact, be so enhanced that the viewer will be genuinely sorry he didn't have a chance all evening to find out what the advertiser was selling.

Especially if the viewer finds out that the thoughtful advertiser's product is a rival brand of the snack the viewer grabbed out of the icebox to munch on as he enjoyed the entertainment provided by the thoughtful advertiser whose product the grateful viewer is eschewing instead of chewing.

But then, as a wise advertiser once said, you can't win 'em all.

Doc. Duncan Says

DOC DUNCAN SAYS: If the un-American unconstitutionalist keeps on buying to disarm our American citizens, they may wake up some beautiful morning and find the whites marching all over our nation with no party lines and no holds barred. The plain fact is the people are aware of the fact that disarming the people has been the first move made in other nations, who fell under dictators and added to that is the people have lost confidence in the boys in the driver's seat.

H.L. Hunt Says

CALLING NAMES

Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of the Selective Service System, recently was called "chief procurer for the Army" by a member of a New York City-based group protesting the draft. Demonstrators against the U.S. effort against communism in South Vietnam have hurled the charge of "child murderer" against President Johnson. Newspapers frequently publish pictures of pickets carrying placards that bear insulting messages directed at some individual of whom the pickets disapprove.

Such individious name - calling is used as a substitute for thought and reason. It is the same kind of illogic that moves adherents of the Farleft to smear persons upholding traditional American ideals as "super" or "ultra" patriots.

Freedomists may at times be tempted to reply in kind, but it is a temptation that must be resisted. They simply cannot spare the time and effort for mindless name - calling.

Those who understand the threat to freedom today should not even waste precious moments telling one another how great the danger is. Instead of this, they must invest their time in spreading the freedom message -- by writing a letter to the editor on a patriotic subject, encouraging young people to participate in such movements as Youth Freedom Speakers, commending the editor whose writings show that he knows what freedom is about, encouraging the businessman who lets his patriotism show in his advertising.

Such affirmative activities require only a small amount of effort. They will prove far more effective than all the name-calling indulged in by those who want to change America into something far different from the land of the free. HLH.

Do you own a late automobile with a high performance engine, four-speed floor transmission, bucket seats, radio, deluxe wheel covers and new tires? If you do, then you can be reasonably sure that some auto thief has noticed it, and is waiting for the opportunity to relieve you of your precious possession.

The Missouri State Highway Patrol notes that such special equipped late model cars are prime targets for teenagers and commercial auto thieves. Teenagers want to take these deluxe high - powered cars on so-called "joyrides." Commercial auto thieves are primarily interested in stripping these cars of their special componate parts. Last year, 8 out of every 10 vehicles stolen were taken by members of these two groups of auto thieves.

The Patrol states that you can increase your chances of NOT having your car stolen by 50 per cent, no matter what its year or model, by simply removing the keys from the ignition and locking all doors whenever you park the car

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

END OF 5-MONTH BOYCOTT

On Sept. 19, Drew Pearson reported that the confirmation of Commissioner Carl Bagge to the FPC had been stuck in the senate commerce committee for five months as a result of opposition by Sen. Everett Dirksen, R-Ill., his original sponsor.

On Sept. 26, Pearson further reported that the commerce committee would report Bagge's name out to the full senate on that day.

On Sept. 26, this is exactly what happened.

WASHINGTON -- Vice President Humphrey, a small-town South Dakota druggist and a political product of the farmer - labor party, has spent most of his life knocking big business. He now feels that big business has been helpful in promoting better government.

In fact, he has had some heart - warming experiences with businessmen in bettering racial relations this summer.

This new cooperation, Humphrey feels, is partly because business realizes that it has a tremendous stake in the big cities and in stable race relations; partly because President Johnson has tried to encourage business - government cooperation. It was Johnson's idea to combine the labor and commerce departments as a symbol of labor and business harmony. The idea fell flat, but LBJ is still trying to promote better relations between business, labor and government.

During the past summer vice President Humphrey had various meetings with business leaders. On one occasion he told them: "I'm LBJ's Billy Graham. I go around preaching our doctrine. It's the doctrine of cooperaton. There's got to be a partnership between business and government. People on relief are not good customers."

One thing the Vice President did earlier was to take Dan Kimball, President of Aerojet, to Watts in Los Angeles and urge him to set up a factory.

"Dan almost jumped out of his seat with enthusiasm," recalls Hubert. "He not only built one plant but two Aerojet plants at Watts. This is one reason Watts had no riots last summer.

AMERICA's BEST RADICALS

The Vice President confides that the government also has some power up its sleeve - namely the power of awarding contracts. Discreetly it has used that power to improve race relations.

He gives credit to general dynamics for planning a plant in Fort Defiance, Ariz., and to Fairchild Aviation for building a plant at Shiprock, N.M., both in Navaho country. These should be of great help to employment in a long - depressed area.

Humphrey gets quite enthusiastic about some of the big business leaders, including David Rockefeller of Chase Manhattan Bank, Henry Ford, and Jim Roche of General Motors.

"You are America's best radicals," he told them.

"They don't like it much when I tell them that," Humphrey confided later, "but they know America has to move ahead, and they're moving America."

To Roche, head of the far-flung General Motors Company, he once said: "The fringe benefits of General Motors are better than in any socialist state."

"The greatest thing Johnson has done," says the Vice President, "is to have made American businessmen understand that we're not trying to dominate them. We want to work together with them."

So speaks the leader of the farmer - labor party who spent much of his life bucking big business.

MID-MOUNTAIN AMERICA

The Appalachia Bill which the house of representatives gutted, as a result of hooky - playing congressmen, is now in secret conference between the house and the senate.

The senate had passed this important bill in April with flying colors, thanks to the masterminding of Sen. Jennings Randolph, who represents the West Virginia segment of long - neglected mid - mountain America.

What happens behind the closed door of a senate - house committee is not known to the public. However, this column can report that Randolph, a Democrat, with the help of Sen. John Cooper, Kentucky Republican, has been able to reinstate some of the money chopped out by the house, including $26 million for health improvement and vocational training; plus some money for access roads to reach isolated sections of the Appalachian Mountains, hitherto accessible only on foot or mule back. The senate in April had voted money for 2,000 miles of roads. The house chopped this down to 1,200 miles. The conferees have now agreed on a compromise of 1,600 miles.

Chief Hatchet man against Appalachia is Rep. "Clean Sheets" Cramer of affluent West Florida, a Republican. Incidentally, this column owes an apology to Cramer for reporting that his Florida laundry manager, Jack Insco, was on the government payroll at $10,189 a year while the Cramer laundry gets $80,000 from the government for washing the linen of MacDill air force base. The figure $10,189 was taken from last year's payroll and is in error. Laundry Manager Insco has now received a raise; the figure should read $15,063.48. Our apologies to Rep. Cramer for understating his ability to raid the federal treasury.

Note: The Appalachia bill passed the senate in 1965 by a vote of 3 to 1. This year the senate showed its approval of the program to rebuild mid-mountain America by voting for it 5 to 1.

Mrs. Dean Rusk was so absorbed in her daughter's wedding ceremony that she left her coat hanger in her coat as she carried it over her arm to the ceremony. . . Herb Caen of the San Francisco Chronicle says we're not being doves or hawks in Vietnam; we are all just pigeons. . .The Romanian President of the general assembly, Corneliu Manescu, first communist ever to preside over that body, has been trying to keep aloof and remain impartial RE his old communist pals. Foreign Minister Gromyko of the Soviet Union wouldn't let him, however. He constantly addressed Manescu as "Comrade President."

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

STRIKES ON HORIZON

Major League Baseball Player's Document Discloses Creation Of Union Organization; Hurls Toughest Demands at Club Owners

New York: -- One of these baseball championship seasons the strikes called will be outside -- not inside -- the stadiums of the land. World Series ducat holders, arriving for a long, hot dog laden afternoon, will face pickets, not pitchers.

In the mood of the times, the major league athletes -- like doctors, scientists, space technicians, Hollywood writers and TV profiles -- have built themselves an organization which is a labor union in everything but name.

It's the way of all flesh now. The ball players are taking their grievances to the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB). They're fighting for a guaranteed annual minimum wage -- $12,000 yearly against the current seven grand and the owners' offer of an eventual $8,500. They're arguing for updated grievance machinery, an impartial industry arbitrator, increased 'Murphy Mondy" to match the cost of living, and a fine voice in scheduling. They're even talking about the supply of clothes and uniforms.

Leaders of the Major League Baseball Players Assn., under their comparatively new Executive Director, Marvin Miller, fresh out of the United Steelworkers union inner sanctum, are sounding so much like a union now, the owners have taken on a bright labor infighter themsleves. He's John Gaherin, former president of the Publishers Association of New York City, who was in charge of headaches -- generally known as negotiating with the big city's newspaper unions. So, now on the mounds are Marv Miller of Pittsburgh and Jack Gaherin of the owners' player relations committee.

Gaherin won't find Miller any less adept at pitching curves in this field. This has become razor sharp since the restricted distribution of a seven-page Statement of Policy by the Players Assn. "to be used as a guide in the forthcoming negotiations with the Major League Clubs."

Buried in the virtually unreported statement is the signal for the Executive Board's big pitch. For it says that, against the increase in ticket prices, the higher take in TV royalties, and the ever-rocketing game attendance, "it is difficult to be modest in making proposals."

After a considerable listing of immediate demands during this current negotiatio s season, the players say that they "look for an appropriate resolution of this problem in the immediate future."

Translate this into a set of demands in "rubber, steel, auto," and you have a discussion of speed of production of the product, in this case the ball game.

The players want in on what affects their daily living, their appearances, their travel, even on the length of the ball season. And they want to see that schedule a week before the World Series games so they can bargain on the upcoming season.

They don't, for example, want day doubleheaders following a night game. Split doubleheaders should not be scheduled or rescheduled. "Twi-night" doubleheaders should not be scheduled or rescheduled just before a day game. Night games should not be scheduled or rescheduled on getaway dates if either club has a day game on the morrow in another city.

They want all games starting later than four o'clock to be considered night games. Low temperatures and high winds should be given more recognition in determining whether a game should be postponed and "minimum standards" should be adopted. There should be a day off for clubs traveling between cities in the Eastern Zone and those in the Western Zone. There should positively be no one-day stands. And no games should be played during the "three-day All Star Game Break."

They want the preliminary schedule for following seasons shown to the players' representatives about this time of the year.

They want a joint study committee established consisting of representatives of the Association and the Clubs "to review and discuss the merits and disadvantages of shortening the playing season."

This is the trail of the steel industry's Human Relations Committee developed by Marvin Miller and an erstwhile lawyer, Arthur Goldberg. Undoubtedly the ball players will live better during preseason training and the long haul to the World Series. Slowly the club owners will begin sitting with those many industrial executives who go to all those management seminars.

Yes, Virginia, there was a Babe Ruth.

for you, dear graduate
Now it is time,
I hear them call your name--
I see you gently smile
And light tomorrow's flame;
A torch that you must shield
Against fate's constant wind.
Its glow will ever lead
To pathways of a friend;
To wonderment of love
Or fame. . .Perhaps success;
To distant worlds unknown
In search of happiness.
Now it is time,
Walk proudly down life's aisle--
Tomorrow quietly waits. . . .
Lend it your bravest smile.

Bulldogs Tangle With Winless Indians

Winless Kennett will visit at public school stadium for a 7:30 p.m. foo ball game tonight and a northern conference tilt with the undefeated Sikeston Bulldogs.

Sikeston g es into tonight's action with hopes of improving upon its 20-20 tie with the Indians on a rain soaked Indian field last year. The Bulldogs tied the score in the last minute and half of play and missed the extra point for the victory.

Kennett comes into tonight's battle with no victory wounds and many defeat scars. The Indians have been ailing since dropping their season opener to Malden 6-0 and collecting injuries at Poplar Bluff two weeks ago.

Coach Roy Nelson's Kennett squad is young and inexperienced and are apt to explode with a flurry of scoring punch. Although they are light they are quick and agile.

Kennett has scored only 26 points in its first three outings, 20 coming in last week's loss to Jackson. They are the only northern division team, who has yet to win a game. They have yielded 56 points, tops in the south. They have been victims of long scoring drives.

They are better than their record indicates and with the return of injured Greg Buys, their all-conference defensive and offensive star of 1966 to the lineup, they will have a better shot at strong defensive Bulldogs.

Sikeston has had only one big injury so far this season. That was in its opening game against Chaffee when a defensive starter broke an ankle.

Coach Bill Sapp's crew has been missing key players during practice this week due to illness. Star quarterback Bruce Farris was among them.

In the words of Kennett coach Nelson:

"The Bulldogs defense is better than that of last year and the swifty backfield poses a big problem for my Indians."

Kennett has a reputation for striking early in the game and letting up as it progresses.

According to the northern division statistics, Sikeston is second in yielding scores behind the powerful and strong Poplar Bluff crew. The Bulldogs have given up only 14 points all season and have shut out two of their first three opponents.

Coach Sapp's starting crew will most likely be the same as in last Friday's game against Charleston. Five juniors and six seniors will start on offense. One sophomore, four juniors and six seniors will begin on defense.

Nelson's crew will be headed by junior Signal Caller Ed McKinney, and completed by three other juniors and seven seniors.

Sports Corner

By RON JAYNES

The going is getting tougher as the season progresses and as the teams move into their fourth week of action tonight. . .We see a few surprises as the north winds bring to the area their first real football weather of the season.

Fans can check in their raincoats, which had been put to use in the three previous weeks, and check out their gloves, scarfs and winter coats because the weather man says. . .Its going to be Coooool . . . .tonight.

Now. . .as we get set to call tonight's action. . . We'll take our leisure time and try for a perfect night after hitting six of eight last week.

Here's how it shapes up from here. . .

Kirkwood at Cape Girardeau -- It'll be interesting to see how the Tiger's defense fares against the aerial attack of Kirkwood. . . Cape is undefeated and got a mental lift as well as its third win of the season last week when it tripped up Kentucky's eighth ranked Mayfield Cardinals. Cape is full of surprises and is keying up for its Oct. 13 encounter with Poplar Bluff. Cape 21, Kirkwood 13.

Perryville at Charleston -- The Pirates will engage their own aerial attack against the Bluejays in a top northern division battle at Bluejay stadium tonight. Charleston will find the going though against the Pirate secondary and come out on the losing end. Perryville 14, Charleston 7.

Poplar Bluff at Jackson -- Coach Jim Lohr's Mules will chase their 18th victory of the season around the Indian turf in this northern division battle tonight. It's about time for John Brown to break loose and there's not better time than tonight. John Brown 18 plus Ben Wyatt 3, Jackson 7.

Kennett at Sikeston -- It's going to be a Dennis Snelling night at public school stadium. . .Watch the Indians try and catch Mr. Half Blur and the Bulldogs. The Indians will have to wait awhile for their first win. Tonight's game belongs to the revenge minded Bulldogs, who hope to improve on their 20-20 deadlock at Indian field last year. Sikeston 35, Kennett 13.

Malden at Caruthersville -- A must victory for both squads. . . if they hope to stay in the running for the southern division conference crown. Maldens began to jell. . .so watch out. . . Tigers and southern foes. Malden 28, Caruthersville 12.

Chaffee at Illmo - Scott City -- Another loss for the inexperienced ISC-Rams. Glenzy's regime is building. . .and this will be number two for the Red Devils. Chaffee 27, Illmo-Scott City 0.

Dexter at Hayti -- The Bearcats are the surprise of the southern division and might get surprised tonight. . .This is our upset of the week. . .Hayti 21, Dexter 19.

East Prairie at Portageville -- If the Eagles are to show themselves. . .it'll be tonight. . . The Bulldogs will triumph . . .Portageville 44, East Prairie 18.

Gideon at Steele -- A real test for the Bulldogs. . .Steele. . . that is. Gideon is still high about winning its first home game in six seasons and might find itself on the wrong end tonight. . .But Steele is inexperienced and it's Gideon 13, Steele 6.

LAST WEEK'S RESULTS

Cape Central 14, Mayfield, Ky. 12
Sikeston 27, Charleston 0
Jackson 25, Kennett 20
Poplar Bluff 27, Perryville 7

Weatherman Throws Rain Into AL Race

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The weatherman, throwing his delaying spitter at Detroit, has raised the distinct possibility that you or I will wind up pitching for the Tigers in their last game of the regular season.

The opening game of Detroit's last-ditch series with California was rained out Thursday night and now the Tigers— still in contention in the American League's up-tight pennant race — face a twi-night doubleheader today and single games Saturday and Sunday.

Joe Sparma was to pitch Thursday and, with Earl Wilson scheduled today and Mickey Lolich on Saturday. Sparma conceivably could have come back with two day's rest for the finale Sunday.

But with Sparma's turn moved up to today's first game, he's out of the picture after that. Denny McLain, who dislocated a couple of toes last week, says he's ready, but Manager Mayo Smith is skeptical. And that exhausts the list of Tiger starters.

The forecast in Detroit today, by the way, was for rain, setting up the intriguing possibility of consecutive doubleheaders on Saturday and Sunday. The Tigers can clinch at least a tie for the flag by sweeping the four-game set.

In the only other game involving the four pennant contenders tonight, Chicago is at home to Washington. The White Sox are right down at the end of the stick; one more defeat and their chances of even tying for the pennant are gone.

Minnesota, in first place by a game, nand Boston, tied with Detroit for second, get a second straight day of rest before opening their climactic two-game set in Boston Saturday.

There was baseball action Thursday, all in the National League where Philadelphia edged San Francisco 2-1, Cincinnati swept a doubleheader from Atlanta 8-0 and 9-1 and Los Angeles beat New York 3-0. St. Louis and Chicago were rained out.

Reliever Dick Farrell got Willie Mays to ground into a double play with the bases loaded in the ninth, saving the Phillies' victory over the Giants.

Jim Maloney shut out the Braves on four hits in the opener, striking out 12, and Sammy Ellis scattered seven hits in the nightcap in the Reds' doubleheader victory.

Claude Osteen heid the Mets to five hits and tripled in two runs to break a scoreless tie in the seventh inning.

Third Ranked Arkansas State Meets Golden Eagles Of Tenn. Tech

JONESBORO, Ark. -- Arkansas State University's Indians, rated No. 3 and No. 8 in this week's two wire service college division polls, will face their second challenge of the season Saturday night when they travel to Tennessee Tech to face an offensively potent Golden Eagle team. Game time will be 7:30 (CDT), and the game will be carried over the Indian Sports Network.

The Cookeville, Tenn., team has tallied 50 points in its first two encounters, losing a 31-28 scoring duel to Youngstown University in its opener, then coming from behind to nip Murray State 22-21 last week.

The Eagles led Murray 14-0 after one quarter as Tech's powerful ground game scored two quick touchdowns.

That ground attack is led by fullback Larry Schreiber, who gained 591 yards rushing last year, and halfback Joe Raleigh.

Raleigh, along with end David Hudson, are the primary passing targets of quarterback Dale Swain, who has done an outstanding job in the first season as a starting quarterback.

A-State was impressive in its opening victory over Western Michigan as it upset the major ranked Broncos, one of the best teams to ever appear on an Arkansas State University schedule, 21-8.

But the Indians' pass defense was spotty, allowing WMU to roll to more than 200 yards through the air and gain their only touchdown on a 50-yard completion.

However, the Tribe did come up with three timely interceptions, and recovered three fumbles to offset its mistakes.

The Indians' defense will again be led by linebackers Bill Bergey and Tommy Sain, who played well against the Broncos. Other starters will be ends Steve Puryear and Rick McBridge, tackles Clovis Swinney and Ken Bennett and nose guard Rodney Downs.

In the defensive secondary will be Pete Garris, a pleasant surprise at monster man last week, safety Dick Ritchey and halfbacks Orley Massena and Steve Strubble.

Offensively, the Tribe will go with the rugged running of fullback Steve Gankiewicz, who gained 163 yards rushing and scored all three TDs last week, and halfback Frank McGuigan, who carried only eight times but for a 5.3 yard per carry average.

End Gerald Jumper and halfback Benny Winford were the chief passing targets of quarterback Tim Keane against WMU, and they will receive help from tight end Virgil Peyton.

Ron Worthen, the 235-pound center who led the way for five consecutive quarterback sneaks to get the Indians out of precarious field position against WMU, will start at the midpoint of ASU's offensive line.

Starting guards will be Dennis Roberts and Dwaine Glenn and Jackie Smith and Mike Hinrichs will start at the tackle slots.

Kevin McClelland, who kicked nine times for a 36.8 yard average, will again try to keep the ball high enough to avoid a long punt return. His kicks were returned for a total of only 32 yards last week.

Placement kicker Mike Everett booted all three ASU extra points last week, and he will be used as a field goal kicker if the situation arises.

Undefeated Records On Line In Prep Action

The first real football weather of the year finds four undefeated teams going into their fourth games of the season tonight as area high school griders take to the field.

Poplar Bluff, Cape Girardeau Central and Sikeston have unblemished records in the northern division while Dexter, an upstart in the southern division, goes into tonight's action with a 3-0 mark.

Tonight's top southern attraction centers at Hayti, where the 3-0 Dexter Bearcats meet the 2-1 Hayti Indians. Another game of interest will be that in Caruthersville, where Malden visits. A loss by either team will lessen its chances of a conference title.

In the north, Poplar Bluff's visit at Jackson is top rated as is Perryville's game at Charleston. The Mules will work on their 18th consecutive victory over a three-year span and are rated the number one team in the state. Jackson's offense began rolling after an opening game defeat and has rolled up big victories over its last two opponents, including a rousing win over southern favorite Malden.

Tonight's schedule:

Kirkwood at Cape Central
*Perryville at Charleston
*Poplar Bluff at Jackson
*Kennett at Sikeston
*Malden at Caruthersville
Chaffee at Illmo-Scott City

Poplar Bluff's Moss Leads District Scorers

Besides the loyal Sikeston Bulldog football fans there was one area prepster glad to see the Charleston Bluejays shut out last week in the northern division battle on the Bluejay turf. That young man was Poplar Bluff's Leroy Moss.

Maybe he wasn't hoping for a shutout but surely he hoped that the Jays Everett Holly didn't score.

Moss and Holly were tied for the Southeast Missouri district scoring lead last week but Moss' 48-yard touchdown in the Mules 27-7 romp over the Perryville Pirates put him in the lead with six touchdowns in three games and 36 points.

Holly and Carl Barker of the southern divisions Malden Green Wave squad are tied for second with 30 points. Barker ran for three touchdowns in last week's 39 to 6 Green Wave victory over Gideon.

Perryville's Mike Gotto with eight extra points and two touchdowns is in fifth place in the northern division scoring race behind third place Poplar Bluff's All-State John Brown, who has four TD's for 24 points and Jackson's Ron Ashman, who has four TD's for 24.

Sixteen northern division players have scored in double figures. 14 have scored in double figures in the southern division.

Poplar Bluff's Ben Wyatt has booted 10 extra points to lead in that category over Sikeston's extra point specialist Webb Edwards; who has nine to his credit. Perryville's Mike Gotto has eight extra points to make up the three top extra point men in the north.

The southern division extra point lead is held by Portageville's Fisher who has seven, followed by Caruthersville's Larry Fisher, who has four.

No field goals have been registered as the teams move into their fourth week of action tonight.

Adult Movies Keeping TV Censors Busy

NEW YORK (AP) — The current popularity of feature films shown six nights a week on the television networks is easy to understand while they are all loading in their most attractive movies with the most powerful star names to lure audiences.

In just the past week we had on tap Peter Sellers and David Niven in a farce, "The Pink Panther;" "Mutiny on the Bounty;" a Jerry Lewis comedy; another comedy with Paul Newman and Joanne Woodward and, Thursday night, Tennessee Williams' "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" with Elizabeth Taylor.

All this may be great for the home audiences, but a large number of the fairly recent films turned over to television in those multimillion-dollar packages were made for the "adult audiences." Some are so adult-oriented that they give the network censors some troubled moments.

"Never on Sunday," a hit to be run this weekend, has a central character who is a prostitute. It was run and rerun at the network, and in the end a few minutes of film was snipped out, in the interests of good taste and to forestall complaints about excessive sex and nudity.

"We try to edit out material which is offensive," said one network censor. "We're not afraid of any mature themes or strong drama if they are well handled. We don't even mind strong language if it is necessary. But where it is a matter of simple good taste, we try to do something."

The networks do get mail complaints about such matters, however, most comes from adults who say they were embarrassed by a show while watching it with a youngster.

Many writers who move between movies and television find there is much more freedom in films and two of them, Bill Persky and Sam Denoff, formerly "Dick Van Dyke Show" writers and now producers of "Good Morning World," say that the network censors operate on "a double standard."

All three networks deny it.

Oil Painting Courses Offered in Bootheel

CARUTHERSVILLE — Two oil painting courses will be given starting Oct. 10 according to John E. Martin, director of the University of Missouri extension center, sponsor of the courses.

Basic oil painting, a course for the beginner, will be given at the Caruthersville high school Tuesday nights," Martin said.

Instructor for the basic course is William Klapp, instructor in art, at the University of Missouri in Columbia.

Painting the portrait, a more advanced course, will provide an opportunity for artists in this area to study and under John S. Weller, associate professor of art at the University of Missouri. This course will be held at the Kennett high school each Tuesday night starting Oct. 10.

Both courses will meet for two hours per night for six weeks if a minimum number enroll by Oct. 5.

Enrollment blanks may be secured by phoning or visiting the University Extension Center in Kenett, TU 8-4722 or in Caruthersville ED 3-0258. Other courses being offered include investments, growth and guidance of the small child, and news photography.

English Canon Gains Approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Roman Catholic hierarchy in the United States has authorized an English translation of the Canon or central prayer of the Mass, beginning Oct. 22, thus eliminating Latin entirely from the audible part of the service.

Archbishop John F. Dearden of Detroit, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, announced the decision Thursday.

The Canon is the prayer of praise and thanksgiving that includes the words attributed to Jesus at the Last Supper.

Exclusively Latin Masses have almost vanished in this country although they are still permissible in some areas.

The newly authorized English version of the Canon was prepared by the International Committee on English in the Liturgy.

It eventually is expected to come into use throughout the English-speaking world.

This version is basically a direct translation of the Latin text but stresses simple phrases in contrast to the multiple and superlative adjectives found in the Latin.

For example, the opening words of the Canon, "clementissime Pater," literally meaning "most merciful Father," have been translated simply into "Father." The words "haec dona, haec munera, haec sancta sacrificia illibata," literally meaning "these gifts, these presents, these holy unspotted sacrifices" will be recited as "these gifts we offer you in sacrifice."

In addition, archaic words such as "thou" and "thee" will not appear in the English translation of the Canon. This is in line with English translations of other parts of the Mass designed to emphasize modern English usage.

Second Mental Health Clinic to Open in Bootheel

KENNETT — Tuesday will mark the beginning of the Bootheel's second mental health clinic. The clinic, which is to be held the first Tuesday of each month, will be located at the Pemiscot County Health Center under direction of Dr. Emmett F. Hoctor, Director of Outpatient Services for the Farmington State Hospital.

The clinic will place emphasis on children, but will include the same type of treatment and services available at the Kennett clinic. This includes services and treatment for discharged patients, new referrals by local and area physicians, and those who have been under the treatment of private psychiatrists.

To attend the clinic, patients must be referred by their family physicians. The clinic will begin at 8 a.m., and patients will be seen on a first come, first served basis. The patient should bring to the clinic the referral slip from their family physician.

Mrs. Betty Hayden said she has chosen her volunteers for the first clinic to assist Dr. Hoctor. The volunteers visited the Kennett Clinic Sept. 18, to meet Dr. Hoctor and observe the clinic in progress.

For Late Fall Heating

The POWER of FAITH

By WOODI ISHMAEL

Since 1957, Nicholas Royce has led a crusade for the recognition of Eastern Orthodoxy as a major religious force in the United States.

When he started his campaign, the denomination—fourth largest in this country—was excluded from many areas of public life. For example, there were no Eastern Orthodox chaplains in the military services, although the faith has about six million communicants.

Partly because of Royce's correspondence with political and industrial leaders, Eastern Orthodoxy may be on the way to full recognition. Legislatures of about half the states have passed resolutions officially designating the Eastern Orthodox church as a fourth major faith. Royce's dedication is showing results.

To the Editor:

Electoral College Reform SJR 86 provides the most constructive remedy of the inequities existing in our precent Electoral College system. Under no circumstances should this country ever seriously consider a system of direct vote. Such a system would pose a serious threat to the very foundations of this nation as a Republic. Any delegate voting system is preferable to and better than direct voting. Electoral College Reform SJR 86 deserves the attention and support of all who favor our Republic form of government and the freedom it insures. This is a vital issue and should not be given the "silence treatment."

Dear Mr. Blanton:

This morning I received a tear sheet of the picture page you ran on the 4-H club members from Southeast Missouri who attended the National 4-H Citizenship Short Course in Washington, D.C.

Thank you for giving this fine coverage to an outstanding group of young people.

I'm sure the 4-H club members appreciate this as well. A frequent complaint I hear from young people is the seemingly large amount of space given to a few teenage trouble makers, compared with space given to young people who stay out of trouble. They feel this negative emphasis gives all youth a bad reputation.

The coverage you give in your news columns and picture pages to the accomplishments of youth groups that are doing worthwhile things certainly helps point up the positive side of the situation.

Again, thank you for your cooperation in publishing this picture page.

Sincerely,

Dear Charley:

Thank you for calling attention to the pinching of the little girls in Junior High School. I have a granddaughter blessed with a fair amount of space for pinching purposes who is going to Middle School for the first time this year. She has been instructed to haul off with her best dancing kick and let go with all her might and main to any one that molests her. If she manages to break a leg of the offender, it should be a very fine lesson in the hands off policy.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Mr. Blanton:

R. C. Martin says:

WHAT ABOUT OUR MODERN EDUCATION?

Few of us I fear, realize the dreadful impact which is being made upon this generation, and indeed upon our posterity, as a result of the godless materialistic education which is being fed to the millions of the youth of America. It is impossible to develop a wise leadership by a system of learning which leaves God out. There is no wisdom in education which ignors Jesus Christ. The moral breakdown and the spiritual apostacy so much in evidence in contemporary life can largely be attributed to deliberately shutting God out of our modern educational program.

Your Republic will be pillaged and ravaged in the 20th century just as the Roman Empire was by the barbarians of the 5th century. . . with this difference . . . that the devastators of the Roman Empire came from abroad, while your barbarians will be the people of your country, and the products of your own institutions.

We know full well that we are witnessing the fulfullment of this prophecy to a great extent, and the end is not yet. Dreadful and almost unspeakable is the tidal wave of juvenile delinquency which continues to blight the nation. The explanation of this mad phenomenon is simple. It is none other than the direct fruit of our godless teaching program including the so-called scheme of progressive education. The full and final payoff is still to come.

The modern "leave - God - out" education of our youth for this past generation has not merely resulted in a scourge of reckless crime, distruction of property, personal assault, and similar barbarious practice. It has numerous other outcroppings. It has produced a wave of sensualism and immorality which engulfs literally millions of young lives. These for the most part have not been fortified to live in this kind of a world by godly home instructions and association with Sunday school and church. Certainly they have had little or no help from the public schools.

This is not to say that all such youth who have been deprived of these blessings have gone wrong or are going wrong in a gross sort of way. Nevertheless, the number who have is infinitely to great.

Sincerely,
R. C. Martin - the voice of concern

Woman Clerk Shot For Refusing Bandit's Order to Disrobe

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP)— A bandit wounded a woman clerk in a holdup at a savings and loan office Thursday after she refused to disrobe as he ordered.

Officials of the Citizen's Loan and Savings Co. said the man escaped with more than $1,700.

The gunmen forced two executives of the firm into a vault, then ordered Mrs. Wilcoxson to undress in a rest room.

She said the man grabbed at her when she didn't disrobe. She recoiled and he shot at her. The man then walked out, after telling Mrs. Wilcoxson and the men to "stay put" for five minutes.

Churchmen Believe Phony Christian Era Has Had It

NEW YORK (AP) — "Nominal Christianity has had it."

That's the stark assessment of present-day church life voiced by a leading Methodist theologian, the Rev. Dr. Albert Outler. Others have sounded similar views.

They call for firmer commitment to basic doctrine and its demands, and they challenge what they consider a rash of lax departures from it to appeal to passing, modern outlooks.

"The time may have come for theology to be more concerned with the truth of the Christian faith than with courting the elusive modern man," says the Rev. Dr. William Hordern, a United Church of Canada scholar.

There also is a growing conclusion that the Church is entering a period when its character and makeup will require tougher dedication to its teaching, in an atmosphere of much disbelief.

"In the new era— and it has started already— phony Christians will be recognized as phony," Roman Catholic Archbishop Robert E. Lucey of San Antonio told a recent gathering there.

In this connection, two tendencies, cited as widespread problems in recent church life, have drawn increasing fire from various religious leaders:

— The casual apathy of many churchgoers toward doctrine and its implications for conduct. This indifference, and vagueness about specific belief, has been brought out in numerous studies.

— The recent splurge of novel, inconoclastic approaches to faith, often by some theologians themselves, such as the coiners of the "Death of God" label for the modern technological age.

Both approaches are producing a backlash, however, and also signs of a countertrend, resisting the casual, complacent type of churchmanship and the scaling down of doctrinal criteria.

Noting the flurry of assaults on classic Christian beliefs, the Rev. Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, general secretary of the World Council of Churches, told its central committee meeting in August on the island of Crete that the interdenominational body must stick to gospel standards.

"The ecumenical movement depends today as it has from its beginnings on the transcendent God made known in His Son, Jesus Christ our Lord," he declared.

Other influential churchmen, including Pope Paul VI, have spoken out increasingly lately against what they call a wave of superficial interpretations that have spread skepticism in the churches.

Patrick Cardinal O'Boyle, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Washington, says the modern "enemies of religion" usually are within it.

Dr. Outler, of Perkins School of Theology in Dallas, says churches have been indulging in "the dangerous game of theological roulette— of seeing who had the gravest doubts, the most audacious repudiations of historic Christian teaching, who could come the closest to atheism and not topple over."

School Spirit Is Essential To High School Students

WHAT IS SCHOOL SPIRIT?

Many people say it is cheering and supporting their team at games, but is that all it is?

School spirit can be defined in various ways.

It can be shown by taking care of school property. If a student is proud of his school, he will uphold the rules and regulations of his school. This, too, is a sign of school spirit.

Of course, cheering at games shows school spirit, but so does honesty and sportsmanship. Dishonesty and bad sportsmanship put a bad reflection on the school. If students are fair and good sports, other individuals and schools will respect the school as well as the students.

Cooperating with the faculty plays a large part in obtaining school spirit. Having the ability to get along with teachers, not only helps the teacher get to know the student as a person, but also helps the relationship between student and teacher. If a student gets along with his teacher, it is much easier for him to learn.

Another essential phase of school spirit is the willingness to work in school. If a person wants to be a good student, he can. Teachers can also teach a student who wants to learn much better than one who doesn't.

Last, but not least, responsibility is an important factor of school spirit. A student must be responsible to achieve anything in school. Each person should share in the school's responsibilities and not leave them up to just a few students to handle.

If the students of Sikeston high school would put forth a little effort to practice all the various forms of school spirit, they would not only be bettering themselves, but their school as well.

Career Choice Should Be Product Of Deep Thought

CHOICE OF A CAREER for today's student is one of the most important decisions he will ever make because this will determine his place in society and the course of his life.

His choice should be the result of careful thought, consideration and research.

A student should not set his mind on one career and remain blind to all others. Opportunities in almost every field imaginable are available to capable people, and these occupational opportunities should not be bypassed.

They should be explored, examined and probed from every possible angle.

Various factors should be taken into consideration in selecting a career.

An ideal occupation woud be one that suited a student's personality and his interests, but other factors are just as important. Salary, working conditions, opportunity for advancement, and the amount of education or training needed for the job should be considered.

Type of position, the future, and opportunities to enter the field should be examined, along with such added benefits as pensions and retirement plans.

Determining element should be the fact that the student is interested in the position, enjoys the work, and wants to make a career of this type of vocation.

A student of today is engaged in a vast race for an affluent position in society.

His choice of a career is one of the first steps to be taken in the climb to the top, and it is one of the most important decisions he will ever have to make.

Prehistoric time has been represented on one side of the float with a cave and men attacking a huge dinosaur with clubs and rocks.

Future Business Leaders will be competing in the school category for a prize of $100. The organization received honorable mention on its float last year in the parade.

The modern world is depicted on the other side of the bridge. A complex computer handling the problems of today helps give a hint of the future.

FBLA Members Send Ditty Bags To U.S. Soldiers

Sikeston high school Future Business Leaders of America is promoting a ditty bag campaign for the Scott County servicemen in Vietnam.

Books, writing materials and games are to be placed in the bags. All paper items must be wrapped in plastic to keep the moisture away.

Articles must be turned in to sponsor Mrs. Rovena Hillsman, Mary Mack or Betty Powers by Wednesday, Oct. 11, to reach Vietnam by Christmas.

Members of the organization hope that the students will help them show the boys in Vietnam that they care.

Growler Sales Are Advancing, Orders Booming

Yearbook sales began last Wednesday morning in Sikeston high school.

"Sales are booming and the '68 Growler promises to be better than ever," said art editor Sheila Topp.

Natural colored end sheets in the front of the book will be the band in formation, and the football players, dressed in the red blazers, wiith the Red Pepper officers and cheerleaders will highlight the end sheets in the back.

Nominees for the Growler king and queen were elected in senior homerooms last week.

Nominees for king are Carl Barnett, Jim Bucher, Jim Carney, Bill Carr, Ed Felker, Mike Garner, Hank Lippert, Robert McCord, King Sidwell, Mike Thrower and Ed Cheek.

Marching Band Will Execute Step-Two Drill

Sikeston high school "marching Bulldogs," directed by Keith Collins, will present a salute to George M Cohan tonight during the halftime of the Sikeston-Kennett football game.

Performing on the home field, the band will begin its show with the forming of a large block band formation. At the signal from the drum majors Susan Jobe and Jan Harper, the 155 marching members of the SHS band will move down the field to the strains of "The Band Played On."

Following the call to attention, given by drum majors Susan Jobe and Jan Harper, the 155 marching members of the Sikeston band will move from all parts of the field into four large company fronts.

After playing the fanfare from "The Spotlight on the Brass," the band will perform a precision drill to the straics of "Victor's March."

The twirlers, headed by Roseann DesChamp, will do a novelty dance routine to "The Girlwatcher's Theme."

After moving to a giant SHS, the band will play the award-winning song "Born Free."

As a closing stunt, the band will return to block formation and leave the field playing "The Red and the Black."

To close the show, the SHS marchers will move to company fronts and leave the field playing "The Red and the Black."

During tonight's game, the freshman band will also present a halftime show.

Both the high school and the middle school band will march in the annual cotton carnival parade tomorrow morning.

It takes two to speak the truth -- one to speak, and another to hear.

Aides Assist All Teachers In Many Ways

Eight Sikeston women are working in the Teacher-Aide Program of Sikeston high school that was incorporated into the school two years ago.

This program is aimed at helping the "under-achievers" in that it allows the teacher to devote his time to individual students' needs.

The aides average an eight-hour work day for the regular nine month school period.

Teacher aides assist with clerical work, bulletin boards, supervision, audio-visual equipment, as well as many other jobs that are beneficial to the teachers.

Sikeston high school aides work in specific departments. Mrs. DeWint Zaricor and Mrs. Deane Sprout work in the social studies department.

Serving as vocational department helper is Mrs. Ronald Lee.

Mrs. Merlin Hagy assists in the art and design drafting section.

Working with the English departments are Mrs. Spurlin Beck, Mrs. Clovis Lancaster and Mrs. Fred C. Davis.

Mrs. Huddleston is helping with the math, typing, science and business arithmetic classes.

All the teacher aides agreed that they enjoyed working and being back in the school's busy humdrum.

Ann Landers

Parents Should Protest about Bad Movies for Children to Theater Manager

Dear Ann Landers: What can a parent do these days to protect her youngsters against dirty movies that somehow get coupled with children's entertainment?

Yesterday I took my two youngsters to see Snow White. The kids had been looking forward to this delightful movie for weeks. I phoned in advance to learn if the second movie was O.K. for children. I was told, "Yes. It's a Western. The kids will love it." We arrived just as the second feature was starting.

We weren't in our seats five minutes when I thought I was hearing things. The leading character asked where he could find a "house of joy." A woman appeared in a dress cut down to her navel. She inquired as to whether he wanted a redhead or a blond. Before I could get the children down the stairs and out the door, a hussy in akimono turned up on the screen and asked if he would be more comfortable if he removed his wedding ring. My six-year-old asked, "Is the ring too tight, mommy?" and a half-dozen other questions which I had a hard time answering.

Now the kids are mad at me because they didn't get to see Snow White and I had to promise to bring them next week.

I feel sorry for parents who send their children to the matinee. They have no idea what those kids are looking at for a second feature. Please, Ann Landers, tell us what we can do to get two clean shows on the bill? --- BURNED UP MOTHER

Dear Burned: You apparently live near an exceptionally stupid theater manager. You should write him and tell him what you told me. And don't forget to let him know that you will not patronize his theater if he doesn't comply with your request.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 20-year - old boy who needs your advice. The trouble is my parents. Mom has a terrible temper and a will of iron. She thinks she is always right and will talk for five hours straight to prove a point. Dad is not an alcoholic but he hits the bottle when Mom gets on his back, and she gets on his back about five nights a week.

I am living with my aunt on the other side of town because her apartment is near my job. In a couple of weeks I have to go back to school and this means I must return to my parents' home. I dread the yelling and the fighting. It is darned near impossible to study in the house. Also, a good night's sleep is out of the question. Please tell me what to do. --- HEADACHESVILLE

Dear H: You don't say where school is in relation to your aunt's apartment. If it is possible to remain with your aunt, do so. But do keep in touch with your parents by phone and see them on weekends so they will not feel neglected.

Dear Ann Landers: I did not agree with your advice to the woman who is six years older than her husband. You advised her to admit it, get a passport and take that trip to Europe with him.

I am in exactly the same spot and I'd rather die than let my husband know my true age. I believe in the old adage, "Confession may be good for the soul but it's awfully hard on the reputation."

Any answer? Or do you choose to duck this one?--- FREE THINKING WOMAN.

Dear Woman: Your brand of free thinking can be pretty expensive. Somewhere in this world there's a relative, a neighbor, a schoolmate -- someone who knows your true age. The truth WILL come out one day and you're going to wind up looking like a rather old liar.

Too many couples go from matrimony to acrimony. Don't let your marriage flop before it gets started. Send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Marriage -- What To Expect." Send your request to Ann Landers in care of your newspaper enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self - addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self - addressed, stamped envelope.

If You Were The Judge

Sheriff Can Call out Men But Not Horses

Sheriff Dead-Eye was galloping after a wanted desperado when his horse suddenly decided it was too hot to go chasing after criminals. Settling down under a spreading chestnut tree, it became readily apparent to Dead-Eye that his horse had given up the chase. Hurrying over to Elmer's nearby Corral, Dead-Eye continued the pursuit on one of Elmer's more public spirited horses. While he never did catch up to the desperado, Elmer did catch up to Sheriff Dead-Eye and sued him for stealing his horse.

"I don't care who he was chasing," Elmer told the judge. "He had no right to take my horse without my permission."

"I sure did," was Dead-Eye's answer. "After all, I'm the sheriff. I have a right to call up a posse. And, if I can call up a horse and rider, I certainly can call up a horse without a rider."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make Sheriff Dead-Eye pay Elmer for commandeering the latter's horse?

This is how the judge ruled: Yes! The judge held that a sheriff is required to furnish his own horse. That while he has the authority to call out men for a posse, he has no right to call out just their horses.

(Based upon an 1897 Wisconsin Supreme Court Decision)

TODAY'S LEGAL POINTER:

While parents can make provisions in a separation agreement for their children, they generally don't mean a hill of beans if a court should decide that those provisions are not in the best interests of the children.

The Prayer

From the Upper Room

God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ. (Galatians 6:14)

PRAYER: O God, in these days when a "cross - less" Christianity seems to be the desire of some, we pray that we may glory in the cross and bear it joyfully. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

Remap Dispute Foes Find Point Of Agreement

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Agreement was reached Tuesday among opponents in a legal battle over Missouri's congressional redistricting law to seek appropriate population figures relating to the districts.

The 1967 law, passed by the state legislature, was challenged by attorney Paul W. Preisler of St. Louis on grounds that it did not reflect true population figures.

Preisler contended there were several inaccuracies in the population of the 10 districts. He said that the total population shown by the Legislature's plan was more than 1,200 less than the official figures on the 1960 census. Courts require redistricting to be based on the last 10-year census.

In Tuesday's hearing before Judge John W. Oliver of the U.S. District Court, Preisler said he would work with the state attorney general's office in establishing population figures he has questioned.

The attorney general's office has defended the plan.

Agent Says Youth Sacrifice Themselves Foolishly on Drugs

KANSAS CITY (AP) - Young people -- many of them from well-to-do families, are foolishly sacrificing themselves to defy laws against possession or use of marijuana, says a federal narcotics agent.

George J. O'Conner, district supevisor of the U. S. Bureau of Narcotics, told the Missouri Municipal League that most marijuana violators used to come from underprivileged families.

"But now we are faced with sons and daughters of middle and upper class, in the midst of a college career, willing to throw everything away to show their displeasure with the laws," said O'Connor.

He added anyone who uses marijuana finds it easy to take the next step and start using heroin.

"If one wants to be a martyr," said the drug agent, "I am sure there are more worthy causes. I have never seen anyone who was improved by the use of marijuana.

State Asked to Give New Life to Missouri Cities

KANSAS CITY -- Members of the Missouri Municipal League at their 33rd annual conference issued a declaration of needs of Missouri cities.

At the same time the league urged the governor and the general assembly to use their power to "give new life to the cities of Missouri," pointing out that the state's response to the critical needs of cities will determine the future of the state for decades to come.

The league also urged the favorable voter passage of a constitutional amendment which would lower majority voting requirements on general obligation and revenue bonds in Missouri.

Also backed was a plan for the reassessment of real property and a system of block grants to cities to make money available for general purposes instead of for specific projects.

Among the critical conditions highlighted in the league's needs statement were:

Unrest among many in the cities opportunity for training, jobs, housing, medical care and urban life benefits.

Adjacent states are making more progress in industrial and commercial development due to more flexible bond issue laws.

Metropolitan areas are without adequate highways to recreational areas within Missouri and to outstate centers of commerce with the present low gasoline tax inadequate to yield enough funds to provide a highway system which will reduce the alarming death and injury rate.

The rising crime rate, attributable in part to obsolete police systems and antiquated systems of criminal and parole administration.

Numerous cities lack good, modern streets as found in adjacent state cities. Curbs, gutters are non - existent in many cities.

Low wage earner and unemployed lack access to decent medical, hospital and health care because counties and states have not assumed their obligations.

One hundred thousand children of the indignent face prospect of becoming a class of purposeless people, devoid of prospect or hope and unable to obtain job training.

Decay and blight are eroding downtowns of America.

Funds are inadequate for protection of public health; sanitary and storm sewer systems and sewage disposal plants are woefully inadequate.

Funds are lacking to maintain sufficient law enforcement officials and to pay adequate salaries.

Revenues based on local tax structures are inadequate and antiquated, limiting bonding capacities of cities for capital improvements and operating needs.

Among other positions approved by League members were:

Elimination of tangible personal property tax; more reasonable procedures for annexation and the broadening of powers for municipalities to license businesses and occupations.

The league offered assistance to the governor's advisory council on local government law in that group.s study to revise local government statutes and commended past efforts of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes and the air conservation commission in attempting to form a regional air shed pollution control agency for the St. Louis area.

Senators Oppose F.H.A. Restriction

WASHINGTON -- Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo) have urged Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler to withdraw a Treasury department ruling, which restricts Farmers Home Administration assistance to water and sewer districts.

The ruling the senators refer to is one which prevents FHA from insuring loans for new or expanded water and sewer district facilities.

In recent letters to the Treasury Secretary, the Missouri Senators reported the growing concern throughout the state that the insured loan program, one of the most successful and popular of all designed to improve living conditions for rural and small town America, is to be abandoned in favor of a direct loan program, for which adequate funds have not yet been made available.

In the last fiscal year in Missouri alone, State Director J. E. Jose reported to the senators that the Farmers Home Administration made $7,422,000 in insured loans for water systems. This was in addition to $6,782,400 in direct loans and grants of $667,100 for this important work.

This year, in the face of increased demand for this type of loan and grant, the FHA in Missouri has been allocated only $3,500,000 for direct loans and $663,000 for grants. Because of the Treasury Department ruling, FHA can no longer make insured loans in Missouri, the Senators said.

They further pointed out that the amount available this year for construction of water supply systems is less than 30 percent of what was available last year.

"This drastic reduction comes at a time when the program was just getting well started. An ever-increasing number of areas in our state are applying for this type of assistance," Symington and Long said.

"In one area alone, between Kansas City and St. Joseph, this action by the Treasury Department will prevent 1,700 rural families from getting adequate water service.

"With the $70 million a day cost of the war in Vietnam, the people of Missouri can understand why it was decided to reduce the direct loan and grant programs, but they cannot understand this banning of insured loans," the senators stated.

A letter from the Treasury department explained the Secretary's support of the President's programs to provide Federal credit assistance to small communities, and recognized the difficulty small towns have in obtaining credit on reasonable terms for needed public facilities.

The department contends the principal beneficiaries of federal guarantees of tax-exempt obligations, such as water and sewer facility bonds, are the private purchasers of these bonds, and not the borrowing public bodies.

Treasury further stated that the benefit of the tax exemption accrues primarily to private investors in high income brackets, and that there is an unacceptable loss of Federal revenue when private lenders do not have to pay income tax on their interest earnings from tax-exempt public obligations.

Symington and Long, however, contend that the need in rural areas for modern, safe water and sewer systems should be the overriding consideration.

"The alleged cost of the insured - loan program in sacrifice of Federal revenue is not large enough to constitute a problem," they said.

The senators said they are studying the Treasury Department recommendations but will continue to urge reversal of the Department's ruling and a reinstatement of the insured loan program.

Interstate Highway Gaps Shrinking

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

From Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., and Canada to Tampa, Fla., from Greensboro, N.C. to Barstow, Calif., the word is out: Interstate is coming "in."

In bits and pieces stretched like broken chains from coast to coast and border to border, a checkerboard pattern of interstate highways are already criss-crossing the map.

Harried motorists plagued by narrow roads, numerous detours, stop signs and traffic lights may be in for smooth driving, sooner than they think.

The key, however, is money, especialily federal money. Interstate costs are met 90 per cent by the U.S. Bureau of Public Roads and 10 per cent by the states.

Highway officials across the nation are willing to estimate target dates for completion of interstate highway stretches in their states, but each forecast has a monetary string attached.

If federal funds continue to be available, motorists may be able by early 1973 to drive the entire length of Interstate 75, from Sault Ste. Marie to Tampa, on a four-lane highway without a single stop sign, traffic light or intersection at grade.

And this trip could be just the beginning of a longer journey. At Sault Ste. Marie, Interstate 75 crosses the St. Mary's River on the International Bridge and joins the 5,000-mile-long Trans-Canada Highway, the world's longest paved highway.

One of the longest transcontinental routes, Interstate 40, which runs from Barstow to Greensboro, is not expected to be fully completed until 1973.

While long stretches of these and other interstates are finished and open, bottlenecks remain.

Medicare Rate Decision May Be Delayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's elderly are supposed to find out by Oct. 1 whether the $3 a month they now pay for doctor-bill insurance under medicare will be increased for the coming two years, but the announcement may be delayed.

It was learned the administration is considering asking Congress to extend the date by which John W. Gardner, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, is required to announce the new rate.

Sources said department officials would like to see the date extended until Congress has completed action on medicare provisions in the Social Security bill— probably not until November.

Department officials say many pending medicare proposals could require a rate increase above whatever increase the department might now find necessary.

One proposal, now being hotly debated, would add the cost of prescription drugs to medicare benefits. Administration officials have said this would mean raising the rate by 50 cents to $1. The government contributes an equal amount.

Gardner said last week he is against adding drugs to medicare before he gets a final task force report on the issue next June 1.

The Social Security package, including medicare, has passed the House and now is in the Senate.

HEW officials say an extension of the Oct. 1 date might save a lot of administrative confusion.

An "open enrollment" period of three months is supposed to begin Oct. 1 for elderly persons to join the voluntary doctor-bill insurance plan. But the period would have to be reopened if no extension were provided and the rate had to be changed because of congressional action.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The California Supreme Court has ruled that San Francisco voters should have the chance to express their opinion— on the ballot— on America's involvement in Vietnam.

The court, in a 6 to 2 decision, ordered the San Francisco registrar of voters to take steps to put on the Nov. 7 city ballot a measure urging an immediate cease fire and U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam.

Mother Admits Chaining 6-Year-Old Son to Bed

ST. LOUIS (AP)— A boy whose mother chained him to a bed to keep him from taking food from the icebox was freed by police who acted on the tip of a social worker.

Police said 6-year-old Elmer Chaplin had been chained to a bed in the front room of a south St. Louis apartment for the last six days.

An examination at a hospital showed the boy to be suffering from malnutrition. He was fed at the police station and a foster home was arranged.

The boy's mother, Mrs. Lorraine Chaplin, 28, was booked for mistreatment. She told police, "I knew it was wrong, but how do you feed six children on $20 a week?"

The mother admitted tying the boy to the bed at intervals for the last year. Police sought the father. The other five children were cared for by Mrs. Chaplin's mother.

Californians Reverse Position on Viet War

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the past 18 months California's voters have virtually reversed their position on President Johnson's Vietnam policies, a state poll reported. Now they're opposed.

In a copyrighted story the Los Angeles Times reported that 59 per cent of the voters questioned in their state poll said they oppose the President's policies.

That percentage was identical to that which favored the policies in March 1966.

Those now favoring the policies dropped to 26 per cent. Last year only 24 per cent of the voters questioned opposed the President's stand on Vietnam.

Industrial Tax Case Studied by Supreme Court

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Missouri Supreme Court took under advisement the question of tax liability of a company leasing an industrial plant from a Missouri community.

Final arguments were presented in the case between the city of Annapolis, in Iron County, and the Ruberoid Co., a division of General Aniline and Film Corp.

At the outset the State Tax Commission held that the leasehold held by Ruberoid had no value for tax assessment purposes. But the Iron County Circuit Court overturned the commission's holding.

Ruberoid said besides its rental payments to the city it also agreed to pay Annapolis $7,000 to $8,000 a year as "additional rent" in lieu of taxes and to help the city build a municipal waterworks and sewage system.

The company produces roofing granules for final use in composition roofing.

Arson Suspected In Five Area Fires

Arson is suspected in fires that destroyed five farm houses and one barn in the Sikeston area last night.

About 8:30 p.m. fire destroyed an unoccupied house on the Carl Dye farm on route four, one east of Crowder. The fire threatened the barn, but Dye and some farmhands kept the fire from spreading.

Family Tries Patience, Kindness, Hospitality when Skunk Calls in Basement

Editor's Note: Not only lovers keep diaries. Reporter Barbara Lacy has skunk log. There's one in the basement of her home at 926 North Kingshighway. Continued hospitality was offered after a summit conference with city officials.

(By Barbara Lacy)

In dealing with a skunk discretion is the better part of valor.

I know. One lives in my basement.

He's there because city officials, my husband and I decided that being hospitable was the most sensible approach.

Here's how it happened:

1;28 a.m. I'm awakened by strange noises in the house. I immediately wake up my husband.

1;30 a.m. Husband tells me to go back to sleep. He says it is only my imagination.

1;31 a.m. Husband also hears strange noises, and reluctantly decides to search the house, with a wooden candlestick held aloft in his right hand.

1;44 a.m. Husband rules out all possible causes of the noises, except for the possibility of an animal or prowler in the basement.

1;45 a.m. Husband decides to take his chances, and returns to bed.

1;48 a.m. Husband heads toward the basement stairs, armed same as at 1;31 a.m.

1;56 a.m. Husband makes a tour of basement and again decides noises were only in his wife's imagination. As husband begins to return upstairs, he notices a small black and shite striped rodent sneaking by the furnace. Husband diagnoses the problem there is a skunk in the basement.

2;01 a.m. After discussing which plans of action, we decided to telephone the fire department, in accomodating manner suggests that removing skunks is more in the line of duty of the police department.

2;12 a.m. Rather than disturb the police or the skunk at this hour, husband and I decide to close all doors leading to the basement. We tip-toe back to bed.

7;21 a.m. Husband groggily, makes his second tour of the basement. The skunk is still there, now hiding under the stairs. By now we are both tip-toeing and talking in whispers as if there was a new baby in the house.

9;15 a.m. I telephone the police department and explain the problem. Actually I don't want them to shoot the skunk, and I certainly don't want them to agitate or irritate the skunk, who I have now named Oliver.

9;25 a.m. Police and humane officer arrive. After a conference and cautious trip to the basement, they decided that rather than escalate the battle, and take the risk that the skunk might retaliate, we should leave the basement door open and eventually the skunk will get hungry and leave on his own.

5;05 p.m. Husband arrives home from work. A quick tour of the basement answers the question, Oliver is still there. By now we are getting accustomed to his stripes, and our thinking has changed from how to remove Oliver, to how to make the best of his plans to take up permanent accomodations.

I look up skunks in a reference book, and discover that they live in dens and burrows and are chiefly nocturnal, preying upon small rodents, birds, reptiles and insects. Gee, I think to myself, no more crickets in the house. Of course the book also mentions that skunks sometimes project to a distance of several feet a powerful acrid fluid with an exceedingly offensive odor.

6;30 p.m. After a family conference, it's decided. Oliver can stay, providing he minds his manners, and maintains respectful habits of personal hygiene. My husband serves him a bowl of milk, and several leftovers from dinner. Naturally the basement door is always open, and if Oliver decides to leave us there will be no ill will and hopefully no ill wind.

1:30 a.m. Husband tells me to go back to sleep. He says it is only my imagination.

1:31 a.m. Husband also hears strange noises, and reluctantly decides to search the house, with a wooden candlestick held aloft in his right hand.

1:44 a.m. Husband rules out all possible causes of the noises, except for the possibility of an animal or prowler in the basement.

1:45 a.m. Husband decides to take his chances, and returns to bed.

1:48 a.m. Husband heads toward the basement stairs, armed same as at 1:31 a.m.

1:56 a.m. Husband makes a tour of basement and again decides noises were only in his wife's imagination. As husband begins to return upstairs, he notices a small black and shite striped rodent sneaking by the furnace. Husband diagnoses the problem there is a skunk in the basement.

2:01 a.m. After discussing which plans of action, we decided to telephone the fire department, in accomodating manner suggests that removing skunks is more in the line of duty of the police department.

2:12 a.m. Rather than disturb the police or the skunk at this hour, husband and I decide to close all doors leading to the basement. We tip-toe back to bed.

7:21 a.m. Husband groggily, makes his second tour of the basement. The skunk is still there, now hiding under the stairs. By now we are both tip-toeing and talking in whispers as if there was a new baby in the house.

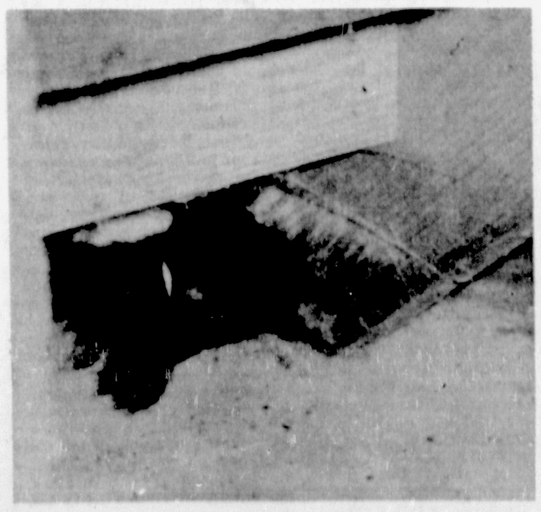
9:15 a.m. I telephone the police department and explain the problem. Actually I don't want them to shoot the skunk, and I certainly don't want them to agitate or irritate the skunk, who I have now named Oliver.

9:25 a.m. Police and humane officer arrive. After a conference and cautious trip to the basement, they decided that rather than escalate the battle, and take the risk that the skunk might retaliate, we should leave the basement door open and eventually the skunk will get hungry and leave on his own.

5:05 p.m. Husband arrives home from work. A quick tour of the basement answers the question, Oliver is still there. By now we are getting accustomed to his stripes, and our thinking has changed from how to remove Oliver, to how to make the best of his plans to take up permanent accomodations.

I look up skunks in a reference book, and discover that they live in dens and burrows and are chiefly nocturnal, preying upon small rodents, birds, reptiles and insects. Gee, I think to myself, no more crickets in the house. Of course the book also mentions that skunks sometimes project to a distance of several feet a powerful acrid fluid with an exceedingly offensive odor.

6:30 p.m. After a family conference, it's decided, Oliver can stay, providing he minds his manners, and maintains respectful habits of personal hygiene. My husband serves him a bowl of milk, and several leftovers from dinner. Naturally the basement door is always open, and if Oliver decides to leave us there will be no ill will and hopefully no ill wind.



Skunk peers from beneath basement steps. . . takes a walk. . . Searches for way out.

Throughout the United States, fall is one of the most pleasant times of the year. It is the time of Indian Summer -- a period of calm before the coming of winter. Fall is also the time of red hats and hunters. Thanks to state game laws, and the conservation efforts of many agencies, from the federal level down to the individual wood lot owner, there is plenty of game, and millions of acres of forests, plains, and mountains for hunters to roam.

The game and the beauty of the countryside will be with us in perpetuity, if hunters and recreationists will be content to enjoy, but not abuse the natural assets placed at their disposal. Courtesy, common sense, care and willingness to abide the rules -- don't be a game hog or a careless camper -- will insure good hunting and a pleasant time for all.

Congress is behaving like a political animal not an economic animal in refusing to vote a tax increase.

There is more agreement among economists than usually prevails that an inflationary exists and that the economy is again heating up dangerously as a result of the pressures entailed in fighting a war abroad and attempting to expand domestic social services at the same time at home.

Without doubt interest rates will push higher and living costs advance more rapidly if Congress does not accept advice from both within and without the Johnson administration to apply brakes to the surging economy by applying a tax increase.

A lot of politics is involved in the delay. Republicans in Congress contend logically enough that the administration should cut back domestic spending. This is not an inconsistent position but so much of the Great Society program already has been approved and put into being that little can be done now to stem the tide.

The American people asked for it and they must pay for it.

There isn't any doubt that the people are alarmed about taxes and are reluctant to pay more.

This is a human trait but it is not a logical position.

The masses stand to lose the most by the inflation that a failure to raise taxes will unleash.

The tax increase in the cold light of today's realities is necessary.

Political ineptitude and reluctance to act created the near money panic of 1966.

With this fresh in mind it is strange that Congress is willing to sit on its hands now.

Congress should act in the public interest by passing a bill applying a broad tax increase bill applying to both individuals and corporations.

up deficiences in training of some National Guard units proved the necessity both of maintaining and strengthening them.

President Lyndon B. Johnson, who slowly has come around to deploring anarchy instead of chanting "we shall overcome", told one reason why in his Kansas City speech to peace officers.

He said that the federal government has fewer policemen than the nation's largest city.

Who then is there to maintain order on the home front when this country's armed forces are engaged abroad?

It is the National Guard.

The American people can thank Congress for resisting Secretary of Defense McNamara's persistent efforts to cut back the National Guards. That is just another one of the numerous things on which McNamara has been wrong.

Some Guard units performed admirably this summer. Others were inept but this country has never experienced any riots like those of this summer and the Guards had no effective training or experience with which to cope with the problems.

The problems were aggravated by cowardly public officials, who tried to mount a law enforcement campaign after rioting and looting had gone uncontrolled for days and snipers had plenty of time to secret themselves in strategic locations.

The major responsibility for this anarchy lies with these public officials -- President Johnson, governors and mayors -- rather than the occasionally erratic and untrained young Guardsmen.

The error is being corrected. Guardsmen now are being trained for riot duty.

It remains to be seen whether public officials will have the courage to use them in time when next time they are needed.

THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN REGRETS

At the end of Motel, one of the three short plays that comprise America Hurrah, a young couple enter a motel room. Then as Robert Brustein described it in The New Republic (Dec. 3, 1966), they "turn on the TV and, to the accompaniment of wild rock-and-roll, go about the cheerful destruction of the room: ripping off the toilet seat, breaking the bed springs, pulling down doors and windows, scrawling obscenities and pornographic rawings with lipstick on the walls, and finally tearing the motel keeper apart, head and all."

The couple will be slightly better behaved when America Hurrah opens at the Vaudeville Theater in London's West End on Thursday, Sept. 21. Presumably they will continue to wreck the premises and the proprietor, but oscenity and pornography are out. The Lord Chamberlain has so decreed.

The Lord Chamberlain is Britain's stage censor. His powers date from the Licensing Act of 1737 and the Theatres Act of 1843. He may forbid the acting of any play on public stage (but not club theatres) whenever he determines that "it is fitting for the preservation of good manners, decorum, or of the public peace to do so." Obscenity and unflattering references to the royal family are considered bad manners by the Lord Chamberlain.

A joint committee of Parliament recommended last July that the Lord Chamberlain be stripped of his censorship powers. Lord Cobbold, the incumbent Lord Chamberlain, welcomed the proposal. However, similar reports were drawn up in 1865 and 1909 and got nowhere. In 1949, a bill to abolish stage censorship got as far as second reading in the House of Commons, but no farther. Just as there'll always be an England, there may always be a Lord Chamberlain also.

Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP) — Life is a collector's game.

Everybody has to play the game, whether he wants to or not. The problem is— what to collect? Shall it be stamps or dolls, wounds or portraits of old windmills, bruises or money?

There are hundreds of choices. So many, many things to collect. But there is one thing you can't go though this world without collecting— memories. And nothing else man collects is so precious to him.

Your own collection is pretty extensive if you can look back and remember when—

Airplane hostesses had so little to do they spent most of their time sitting in the seats and talking to the passengers.

A minister was more interested in getting the members of his congregation into heaven than in solving their problems on earth.

Ice skates had wooden runners instead of steel blades.

There was more nepotism in Hollywood than in Congress.

It was more fashionable for women to wear silver fox furs than mink.

One of the problems of motiring was putting up the car's isinglass and fabric curtains when the weather turned cold. A heater for automobiles? It was only an inventor's madcap dream.

Conservatives were more fearful of Socialists than Communists because most of them, after all, hadn't ever seen a real live Communist.

The idol of childhood was the brawny neighborhood iceman, who drove a horse and wagon and always had a small chip of free ice for any kid— even if the kid was too shy to ask for one.

Only wealthy people belonged to country clubs and played golf.

It was taken for granted in most families that a farmer's sons would grow up to be farmers and a blacksmith's sons would become blacksmiths.

In every small town you could see a local character who wore a wooden leg he had whittled himself.

Children and Negroes were supposed to be seen, not heard— to know their place and stay in it.

Any schoolmarm caught smoking in public could kiss her job goodby.

There were still so many Civil War veterans around that they looked down their noses at the Spanish-American war veterans as young upstarts.

When the doctor made a home call, he was never so busy he couldn't pause for a cup of coffee in the kitchen, take the small children on his knee, and awe them by letting listen to their own heart beat through his stethoscope.

Come to think of it, almost everybody had more time to be courteous and kind and pleasant to one another then. They weren't so saddled by all kinds of urgencies.

Those were the days! Remember?

Here's the best way to pack slacks: Place them on a flat surface and smooth out wrinkles. Then start rolling them, fairly tight, from the waisteband. When rolled like this, they will not only stay in better shape, but can be packed away against the side or top of a bag and take but little space . . . A rolled-up piece of cardboard, with a rubberband around it, will protect a hairbrush, toothpaste tube or anything else from being crushed in packing.

WE MUST BUY WHAT-WAS-IT?

The head of a big advertising agency has disclosed that television tycoons will soon experiment with fewer but longer commercials.

Conceding for the sake of argument that television commercials CAN be longer than some of them seem to be now, it is interesting to contemplate the potentials of the proposed three-minute or even 10-minute -- yes, 10-MINUTE -- air plug.

A homemade survey indicates that a reasonably agile television viewer can in three minutes hoist himself out of his chair, waddle briskly to the kitchen, open the icebox door, make a quick inventory of what he sees, grab enough food and drink to sustain him for another hour, and be back in his seat by the time the movie of the night is resumed.

In a 10-minute commercial spot, the same viewer can do all of the above, make a phone call, splash a little water on his face to keep him awake, and maybe even have time to ask his wife where their teen-age kids is before pop has to be back on duty in front of The Set.

Now the average television viewer is going to appreciate this and have a warm feeling for the advertiser who so thoughtfully allows him so much time to regroup himself for further viewing.

The customer relationship may, in fact, be so enhanced that the viewer will be genuinely sorry he didn't have a chance all evening to find out what the advertiser was selling.

Especially if the viewer finds out that the thoughtful advertiser's product is a rival brand of the snack the viewer grabbed out of the icebox to munch on as he enjoyed the entertainment provided by the thoughtful advertiser whose product the grateful viewer is eschewing instead of chewing.

But then, as a wise advertiser once said, you can't win 'em all.

DOC DUNCAN SAYS: If the un-American unconstitutionalist keeps on buying to disarm our American citizens, they may wake up some beautiful morning and find the whites marching all over our nation with no party lines and no holds barred. H.L. Hunt Says

CALLING NAMES

Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of the Selective Service System, recently was called "chief procurer for the Army" by a member of a New York City-based group protesting the draft. Demonstrators against the U.S. effort against communism in South Vietnam have hurled the charge of "child murderer" against President Johnson. Newspapers frequently publish pictures of pickets carrying placards that bear insulting messages directed at some individual of whom the pickets disapprove.

Such individious name - calling is used as a substitute for thought and reason. It is the same kind of illogic that moves adherents of the Farleft to smear persons upholding traditional American ideals as "super" or "ultra" patriots.

Freedomists may at times be tempted to reply in kind, but it is a temptation that must be resisted. They simply cannot spare the time and effort for mindless name - calling.

Those who understand the threat to freedom today should not even waste precious moments telling one another how great the danger is. Instead of this, they must invest their time in spreading the freedom message -- by writing a letter to the editor on a patriotic subject, encouraging young people to participate in such movements as Youth Freedom Speakers, commending the editor whose writings show that he knows what freedom is about, encouraging the businessman who lets his patriotism show in his advertising.

Such affirmative activities require only a small amount of effort. They will prove far more effective than all the name-calling indulged in by those who want to change America into something far different from the land of the free. HLH.

Do you own a late automobile with a high performance engine, four-speed floor transmission, bucket seats, radio, deluxe wheel covers and new tires? If you do, then you can be reasonably sure that some auto thief has noticed it, and is waiting for the opportunity to relieve you of your precious possession.

The Missouri State Highway Patrol notes that such special equipped late model cars are prime targets for teenagers and commercial auto thieves. Teenagers want to take these deluxe high - powered cars on so-called "joyrides." Commercial auto thieves are primarily interested in stripping these cars of their special componate parts. Last year, 8 out of every 10 vehicles stolen were taken by members of these two groups of auto thieves.

The Patrol states that you can increase your chances of NOT having your car stolen by 50 per cent, no matter what its year or model, by simply removing the keys from the ignition and locking all doors whenever you park the car

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

END OF 5-MONTH BOYCOTT

On Sept. 19, Drew Pearson reported that the confirmation of Commissioner Carl Bagge to the FPC had been stuck in the senate commerce committee for five months as a result of opposition by Sen. Everett Dirksen, R-Ill., his original sponsor.

On Sept. 26, Pearson further reported that the commerce committee would report Bagge's name out to the full senate on that day.

On Sept. 26, this is exactly what happened.

WASHINGTON -- Vice President Humphrey, a small-town South Dakota druggist and a political product of the farmer - labor party, has spent most of his life knocking big business. He now feels that big business has been helpful in promoting better government.

In fact, he has had some heart - warming experiences with businessmen in bettering racial relations this summer.

This new cooperation, Humphrey feels, is partly because business realizes that it has a tremendous stake in the big cities and in stable race relations; partly because President Johnson has tried to encourage business - government cooperation. It was Johnson's idea to combine the labor and commerce departments as a symbol of labor and business harmony. The idea fell flat, but LBJ is still trying to promote better relations between business, labor and government.

During the past summer vice President Humphrey had various meetings with business leaders. On one occasion he told them: "I'm LBJ's Billy Graham. I go around preaching our doctrine. It's the doctrine of cooperaton. There's got to be a partnership between business and government. People on relief are not good customers."

One thing the Vice President did earlier was to take Dan Kimball, President of Aerojet, to Watts in Los Angeles and urge him to set up a factory.

"Dan almost jumped out of his seat with enthusiasm," recalls Hubert. "He not only built one plant but two Aerojet plants at Watts. This is one reason Watts had no riots last summer. There's better employment and more community pride."

AMERICA's BEST RADICALS

The Vice President confides that the government also has some power up its sleeve -- namely the power of awarding contracts. Discreetly it has used that power to improve race relations.

He gives credit to general dynamics for planning a plant in Fort Defiance, Ariz., and to Fairchild Aviation for building a plant at Shiprock, N.M., both in Navaho country. These should be of great help to employment in a long - depressed area.

Humphrey gets quite enthusiastic about some of the big business leaders, including David Rockefeller of Chase Manhattan Bank, Henry Ford, and Jim Roche of General Motors.

"You are America's best radicals," he told them.

"They don't like it much when I tell them that," Humphrey confided later, "but they know America has to move ahead, and they're moving America."

To Roche, head of the far-flung General Motors Company, he once said: "The fringe benefits of General Motors are better than in any socialist state."

"The greatest thing Johnson has done," says the Vice President, "is to have made American businessmen understand that we're not trying to dominate them. We want to work together with them."

So speaks the leader of the farmer - labor party who spent much of his life bucking big business.

MID-MOUNTAIN AMERICA

The Appalachia Bill which the house of representatives gutted, as a result of hooky - playing congressmen, is now in secret conference between the house and the senate.

The senate had passed this important bill in April with flying colors, thanks to the masterminding of Sen. Jennings Randolph, who represents the West Virginia segment of long - neglected mid - mountain America.

What happens behind the closed door of a senate - house committee is not known to the public. However, this column can report that Randolph, a Democrat, with the help of Sen. John Cooper, Kentucky Republican, has been able to reinstate some of the money chopped out by the house, including $26 million for health improvement and vocational training; plus some money for access roads to reach isolated sections of the Appalachian Mountains, hitherto accessible only on foot or mule back. The senate in April had voted money for 2,000 miles of roads. The house chopped this down to 1,200 miles. The conferees have now agreed on a compromise of 1,600 miles.

Chief Hatchet man against Appalachia is Rep. "Clean Sheets" Cramer of affluent West Florida, a Republican. Incidentally, this column owes an apology to Cramer for reporting that his Florida laundry manager, Jack Insco, was on the government payroll at $10,189 a year while the Cramer laundry gets $80,000 from the government for washing the linen of MacDill air force base. The figure $10,189 was taken from last year's payroll and is in error. Laundry Manager Insco has now received a raise; the figure should read $15,063.48. Our apologies to Rep. Cramer for understating his ability to raid the federal treasury.

Note: The Appalachia bill passed the senate in 1965 by a vote of 3 to 1. This year the senate showed its approval of the program to rebuild mid-mountain America by voting for it 5 to 1.

Inside Labor

STRIKES ON HORIZON

Major League Baseball Player's Document Discloses Creation Of Union Organization; Hurls Toughest Demands at Club Owners

New York: -- One of these baseball championship seasons the strikes called will be outside -- not inside -- the stadiums of the land. World Series ducat holders, arriving for a long, hot dog laden afternoon, will face pickets, not pitchers.

In the mood of the times, the major league athletes -- like doctors, scientists, space technicians, Hollywood writers and TV profiles -- have built themselves an organization which is a labor union in everything but name.

It's the way of all flesh now. The ball players are taking their grievances to the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB). They're fighting for a guaranteed annual minimum wage -- $12,000 yearly against the current seven grand and the owners' offer of an eventual $8,500. They're arguing for updated grievance machinery, an impartial industry arbitrator, increased 'Murphy Mondy" to match the cost of living, and a fine voice in scheduling. They're even talking about the supply of clothes and uniforms.

Leaders of the Major League Baseball Players Assn., under their comparatively new Executive Director, Marvin Miller, fresh out of the United Steelworkers union inner sanctum, are sounding so much like a union now, the owners have taken on a bright labor infighter themsleves. He's John Gaherin, former president of the Publishers Association of New York City, who was in charge of headaches -- generally known as negotiating with the big city's newspaper unions. So, now on the mounds are Marv Miller of Pittsburgh and Jack Gaherin of the owners' player relations committee.

Gaherin won't find Miller any less adept at pitching curves in this field. This has become razor sharp since the restricted distribution of a seven-page Statement of Policy by the Players Assn. "to be used as a guide in the forthcoming negotiations with the Major League Clubs."

Buried in the virtually unreported statement is the signal for the Executive Board's big pitch. For it says that, against the increase in ticket prices, the higher take in TV royalties, and the ever-rocketing game attendance, "it is difficult to be modest in making proposals."

After a considerable listing of immediate demands during this current negotiatio s season, the players say that they "look for an appropriate resolution of this problem in the immediate future."

Translate this into a set of demands in "rubber, steel, auto," and you have a discussion of speed of production of the product, in this case the ball game.

The players want in on what affects their daily living, their appearances, their travel, even on the length of the ball season. And they want to see that schedule a week before the World Series games so they can bargain on the upcoming season.

They don't, for example, want day doubleheaders following a night game. Split doubleheaders should not be scheduled or rescheduled. "Twi-night" doubleheaders should not be scheduled or rescheduled just before a day game. Night games should not be scheduled or rescheduled on getaway dates if either club has a day game on the morrow in another city.

They want all games starting later than four o'clock to be considered night games. Low temperatures and high winds should be given more recognition in determining whether a game should be postponed and "minimum standards" should be adopted. There should be a day off for clubs traveling between cities in the Eastern Zone and those in the Western Zone. There should positively be no one-day stands. And no games should be played during the "three-day All Star Game Break."

They want the preliminary schedule for following seasons shown to the players' representatives about this time of the year.

They want a joint study committee established consisting of representatives of the Association and the Clubs "to review and discuss the merits and disadvantages of shortening the playing season."

This is the trail of the steel industry's Human Relations Committee developed by Marvin Miller and an erstwhile lawyer, Arthur Goldberg. Undoubtedly the ball players will live better during preseason training and the long haul to the World Series. Slowly the club owners will begin sitting with those many industrial executives who go to all those management seminars.

Yes, Virginia, there was a Babe Ruth.

"THE BUILDINGS OF BOSTON, like its women, are neat and handsome, but the city's streets, like the hearts of its men, are paved with pebbles." An Englishman named Mr. Ward said that . . .TEDDY ROOSEVELT REFUSED to put a Christmas tree in the White House on the theory that evergreen cutting would strip the country's forests . . ."OFTEN A BRIDESMAID but never a bride." That phrase is in the idiom now. Hardly anybody recalls a mouthwash salesman thought it up for one of the world's greatest advertisements in 1923.

Congress is behaving like a political animal not an economic animal in refusing to vote a tax increase.

There is more agreement among economists than usually prevails that an inflationary exists and that the economy is again heating up dangerously as a result of the pressures entailed in fighting a war abroad and attempting to expand domestic social services at the same time at home.

Without doubt interest rates will push higher and living costs advance more rapidly if Congress does not accept advice from both within and without the Johnson administration to apply brakes to the surging economy by applying a tax increase.

A lot of politics is involved in the delay. Republicans in Congress contend logically enough that the administration should cut back domestic spending. This is not an inconsistent position but so much of the Great Society program already has been approved and put into being that little can be done now to stem the tide.

The American people asked for it and they must pay for it.

There isn't any doubt that the people are alarmed about taxes and are reluctant to pay more.

This is a human trait but it is not a logical position.

The masses stand to lose the most by the inflation that a failure to raise taxes will unleash.

The tax increase in the cold light of today's realities is necessary.

Political ineptitude and reluctance to act created the near money panic of 1966.

With this fresh in mind it is strange that Congress is willing to sit on its hands now.

Congress should act in the public interest by passing a bill applying a broad tax increase bill applying to both individuals and corporations.

up deficiences in training of some National Guard units proved the necessity both of maintaining and strengthening them.

President Lyndon B. Johnson, who slowly has come around to deploring anarchy instead of chanting "we shall overcome", told one reason why in his Kansas City speech to peace officers.

He said that the federal government has fewer policemen than the nation's largest city.

Who then is there to maintain order on the home front when this country's armed forces are engaged abroad?

It is the National Guard.

The American people can thank Congress for resisting Secretary of Defense McNamara's persistent efforts to cut back the National Guards. That is just another one of the numerous things on which McNamara has been wrong.

Some Guard units performed admirably this summer. Others were inept but this country has never experienced any riots like those of this summer and the Guards had no effective training or experience with which to cope with the problems.

The problems were aggravated by cowardly public officials, who tried to mount a law enforcement campaign after rioting and looting had gone uncontrolled for days and snipers had plenty of time to secret themselves in strategic locations.

The major responsibility for this anarchy lies with these public officials -- President Johnson, governors and mayors -- rather than the occasionally erratic and untrained young Guardsmen.

The error is being corrected. Guardsmen now are being trained for riot duty.

It remains to be seen whether public officials will have the courage to use them in time when next time they are needed.

THE LORD CHAMBERLAIN REGRETS

At the end of Motel, one of the three short plays that comprise America Hurrah, a young couple enter a motel room. Then as Robert Brustein described it in The New Republic (Dec. 3, 1966), they "turn on the TV and, to the accompaniment of wild rock-and-roll, go about the cheerful destruction of the room: ripping off the toilet seat, breaking the bed springs, pulling down doors and windows, scrawling obscenities and pornographic rawings with lipstick on the walls, and finally tearing the motel keeper apart, head and all."

The couple will be slightly better behaved when America Hurrah opens at the Vaudeville Theater in London's West End on Thursday, Sept. 21. Presumably they will continue to wreck the premises and the proprietor, but oscenity and pornography are out. The Lord Chamberlain has so decreed.

The Lord Chamberlain is Britain's stage censor. His powers date from the Licensing Act of 1737 and the Theatres Act of 1843. He may forbid the acting of any play on public stage (but not club theatres) whenever he determines that "it is fitting for the preservation of good manners, decorum, or of the public peace to do so." Obscenity and unflattering references to the royal family are considered bad manners by the Lord Chamberlain.

A joint committee of Parliament recommended last July that the Lord Chamberlain be stripped of his censorship powers. Lord Cobbold, the incumbent Lord Chamberlain, welcomed the proposal. However, similar reports were drawn up in 1865 and 1909 and got nowhere. In 1949, a bill to abolish stage censorship got as far as second reading in the House of Commons, but no farther. Just as there'll always be an England, there may always be a Lord Chamberlain also.

Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP) — Life is a collector's game.

Everybody has to play the game, whether he wants to or not. The problem is— what to collect? Shall it be stamps or dolls, wounds or portraits of old windmills, bruises or money?

There are hundreds of choices. So many, many things to collect. But there is one thing you can't go though this world without collecting— memories. And nothing else man collects is so precious to him.

Your own collection is pretty extensive if you can look back and remember when—

Airplane hostesses had so little to do they spent most of their time sitting in the seats and talking to the passengers.

A minister was more interested in getting the members of his congregation into heaven than in solving their problems on earth.

Ice skates had wooden runners instead of steel blades.

There was more nepotism in Hollywood than in Congress.

It was more fashionable for women to wear silver fox furs than mink.

One of the problems of motiring was putting up the car's isinglass and fabric curtains when the weather turned cold. A heater for automobiles? It was only an inventor's madcap dream.

Conservatives were more fearful of Socialists than Communists because most of them, after all, hadn't ever seen a real live Communist.

The idol of childhood was the brawny neighborhood iceman, who drove a horse and wagon and always had a small chip of free ice for any kid— even if the kid was too shy to ask for one.

Only wealthy people belonged to country clubs and played golf.

It was taken for granted in most families that a farmer's sons would grow up to be farmers and a blacksmith's sons would become blacksmiths.

In every small town you could see a local character who wore a wooden leg he had whittled himself.

Children and Negroes were supposed to be seen, not heard— to know their place and stay in it.

Any schoolmarm caught smoking in public could kiss her job goodby.

There were still so many Civil War veterans around that they looked down their noses at the Spanish-American war veterans as young upstarts.

When the doctor made a home call, he was never so busy he couldn't pause for a cup of coffee in the kitchen, take the small children on his knee, and awe them by letting listen to their own heart beat through his stethoscope.

Come to think of it, almost everybody had more time to be courteous and kind and pleasant to one another then. They weren't so saddled by all kinds of urgencies.

Those were the days! Remember?

TRAVEL-TIME TIPS:

Here's the best way to pack slacks: Place them on a flat surface and smooth out wrinkles. Then start rolling them, fairly tight, from the waisteband. When rolled like this, they will not only stay in better shape, but can be packed away against the side or top of a bag and take but little space . . . A rolled-up piece of cardboard, with a rubberband around it, will protect a hairbrush, toothpaste tube or anything else from being crushed in packing.

IT HAD BEEN STRESSED to the instructor of airborne troops that the psychological approach was of utmost importance. "Above all," his superiors cautioned him, "don't do or say anything that might cause sudden fright to trainees."

Thus, when one engine conked out on a flight and another began smoking badly, the instructor strove for nonchalance as he adjusted his parachute on his way to the hatch door.

"Now I want you men to keep perfectly calm," he said, "while I go for help."

WE MUST BUY WHAT-WAS-IT?

The head of a big advertising agency has disclosed that television tycoons will soon experiment with fewer but longer commercials.

Conceding for the sake of argument that television commercials CAN be longer than some of them seem to be now, it is interesting to contemplate the potentials of the proposed three-minute or even 10-minute -- yes, 10-MINUTE -- air plug.

A homemade survey indicates that a reasonably agile television viewer can in three minutes hoist himself out of his chair, waddle briskly to the kitchen, open the icebox door, make a quick inventory of what he sees, grab enough food and drink to sustain him for another hour, and be back in his seat by the time the movie of the night is resumed.

In a 10-minute commercial spot, the same viewer can do all of the above, make a phone call, splash a little water on his face to keep him awake, and maybe even have time to ask his wife where their teen-age kids is before pop has to be back on duty in front of The Set.

Now the average television viewer is going to appreciate this and have a warm feeling for the advertiser who so thoughtfully allows him so much time to regroup himself for further viewing.

The customer relationship may, in fact, be so enhanced that the viewer will be genuinely sorry he didn't have a chance all evening to find out what the advertiser was selling.

Especially if the viewer finds out that the thoughtful advertiser's product is a rival brand of the snack the viewer grabbed out of the icebox to munch on as he enjoyed the entertainment provided by the thoughtful advertiser whose product the grateful viewer is eschewing instead of chewing.

But then, as a wise advertiser once said, you can't win 'em all.

Doc. Duncan Says

DOC DUNCAN SAYS: If the un-American unconstitutionalist keeps on buying to disarm our American citizens, they may wake up some beautiful morning and find the whites marching all over our nation with no party lines and no holds barred. The plain fact is the people are aware of the fact that disarming the people has been the first move made in other nations, who fell under dictators and added to that is the people have lost confidence in the boys in the driver's seat.

H.L. Hunt Says

CALLING NAMES

Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of the Selective Service System, recently was called "chief procurer for the Army" by a member of a New York City-based group protesting the draft. Demonstrators against the U.S. effort against communism in South Vietnam have hurled the charge of "child murderer" against President Johnson. Newspapers frequently publish pictures of pickets carrying placards that bear insulting messages directed at some individual of whom the pickets disapprove.

Such individious name - calling is used as a substitute for thought and reason. It is the same kind of illogic that moves adherents of the Farleft to smear persons upholding traditional American ideals as "super" or "ultra" patriots.

Freedomists may at times be tempted to reply in kind, but it is a temptation that must be resisted. They simply cannot spare the time and effort for mindless name - calling.

Those who understand the threat to freedom today should not even waste precious moments telling one another how great the danger is. Instead of this, they must invest their time in spreading the freedom message -- by writing a letter to the editor on a patriotic subject, encouraging young people to participate in such movements as Youth Freedom Speakers, commending the editor whose writings show that he knows what freedom is about, encouraging the businessman who lets his patriotism show in his advertising.

Such affirmative activities require only a small amount of effort. They will prove far more effective than all the name-calling indulged in by those who want to change America into something far different from the land of the free. HLH.

Do you own a late automobile with a high performance engine, four-speed floor transmission, bucket seats, radio, deluxe wheel covers and new tires? If you do, then you can be reasonably sure that some auto thief has noticed it, and is waiting for the opportunity to relieve you of your precious possession.

The Missouri State Highway Patrol notes that such special equipped late model cars are prime targets for teenagers and commercial auto thieves. Teenagers want to take these deluxe high - powered cars on so-called "joyrides." Commercial auto thieves are primarily interested in stripping these cars of their special componate parts. Last year, 8 out of every 10 vehicles stolen were taken by members of these two groups of auto thieves.

The Patrol states that you can increase your chances of NOT having your car stolen by 50 per cent, no matter what its year or model, by simply removing the keys from the ignition and locking all doors whenever you park the car

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

END OF 5-MONTH BOYCOTT

On Sept. 19, Drew Pearson reported that the confirmation of Commissioner Carl Bagge to the FPC had been stuck in the senate commerce committee for five months as a result of opposition by Sen. Everett Dirksen, R-Ill., his original sponsor.

On Sept. 26, Pearson further reported that the commerce committee would report Bagge's name out to the full senate on that day.

On Sept. 26, this is exactly what happened.

WASHINGTON -- Vice President Humphrey, a small-town South Dakota druggist and a political product of the farmer - labor party, has spent most of his life knocking big business. He now feels that big business has been helpful in promoting better government.

In fact, he has had some heart - warming experiences with businessmen in bettering racial relations this summer.

This new cooperation, Humphrey feels, is partly because business realizes that it has a tremendous stake in the big cities and in stable race relations; partly because President Johnson has tried to encourage business - government cooperation. It was Johnson's idea to combine the labor and commerce departments as a symbol of labor and business harmony. The idea fell flat, but LBJ is still trying to promote better relations between business, labor and government.

During the past summer vice President Humphrey had various meetings with business leaders. On one occasion he told them: "I'm LBJ's Billy Graham. I go around preaching our doctrine. It's the doctrine of cooperaton. There's got to be a partnership between business and government. People on relief are not good customers."

One thing the Vice President did earlier was to take Dan Kimball, President of Aerojet, to Watts in Los Angeles and urge him to set up a factory.

"Dan almost jumped out of his seat with enthusiasm," recalls Hubert. "He not only built one plant but two Aerojet plants at Watts. This is one reason Watts had no riots last summer. There's better employment and more community pride."

AMERICA's BEST RADICALS

The Vice President confides that the government also has some power up its sleeve - namely the power of awarding contracts. Discreetly it has used that power to improve race relations.

He gives credit to general dynamics for planning a plant in Fort Defiance, Ariz., and to Fairchild Aviation for building a plant at Shiprock, N.M., both in Navaho country. These should be of great help to employment in a long - depressed area.

Humphrey gets quite enthusiastic about some of the big business leaders, including David Rockefeller of Chase Manhattan Bank, Henry Ford, and Jim Roche of General Motors.

"You are America's best radicals," he told them.

"They don't like it much when I tell them that," Humphrey confided later, "but they know America has to move ahead, and they're moving America."

To Roche, head of the far-flung General Motors Company, he once said: "The fringe benefits of General Motors are better than in any socialist state."

"The greatest thing Johnson has done," says the Vice President, "is to have made American businessmen understand that we're not trying to dominate them. We want to work together with them."

So speaks the leader of the farmer - labor party who spent much of his life bucking big business.

MID-MOUNTAIN AMERICA

The Appalachia Bill which the house of representatives gutted, as a result of hooky - playing congressmen, is now in secret conference between the house and the senate.

The senate had passed this important bill in April with flying colors, thanks to the masterminding of Sen. Jennings Randolph, who represents the West Virginia segment of long - neglected mid - mountain America.

What happens behind the closed door of a senate - house committee is not known to the public. However, this column can report that Randolph, a Democrat, with the help of Sen. John Cooper, Kentucky Republican, has been able to reinstate some of the money chopped out by the house, including $26 million for health improvement and vocational training; plus some money for access roads to reach isolated sections of the Appalachian Mountains, hitherto accessible only on foot or mule back. The senate in April had voted money for 2,000 miles of roads. The house chopped this down to 1,200 miles. The conferees have now agreed on a compromise of 1,600 miles.

Chief Hatchet man against Appalachia is Rep. "Clean Sheets" Cramer of affluent West Florida, a Republican. Incidentally, this column owes an apology to Cramer for reporting that his Florida laundry manager, Jack Insco, was on the government payroll at $10,189 a year while the Cramer laundry gets $80,000 from the government for washing the linen of MacDill air force base. The figure $10,189 was taken from last year's payroll and is in error. Laundry Manager Insco has now received a raise; the figure should read $15,063.48. Our apologies to Rep. Cramer for understating his ability to raid the federal treasury.

Note: The Appalachia bill passed the senate in 1965 by a vote of 3 to 1. This year the senate showed its approval of the program to rebuild mid-mountain America by voting for it 5 to 1.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

STRIKES ON HORIZON

Major League Baseball Player's Document Discloses Creation Of Union Organization; Hurls Toughest Demands at Club Owners

New York: -- One of these baseball championship seasons the strikes called will be outside -- not inside -- the stadiums of the land. World Series ducat holders, arriving for a long, hot dog laden afternoon, will face pickets, not pitchers.

In the mood of the times, the major league athletes -- like doctors, scientists, space technicians, Hollywood writers and TV profiles -- have built themselves an organization which is a labor union in everything but name.

It's the way of all flesh now. The ball players are taking their grievances to the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB). They're fighting for a guaranteed annual minimum wage -- $12,000 yearly against the current seven grand and the owners' offer of an eventual $8,500. They're arguing for updated grievance machinery, an impartial industry arbitrator, increased 'Murphy Mondy" to match the cost of living, and a fine voice in scheduling. They're even talking about the supply of clothes and uniforms.

Leaders of the Major League Baseball Players Assn., under their comparatively new Executive Director, Marvin Miller, fresh out of the United Steelworkers union inner sanctum, are sounding so much like a union now, the owners have taken on a bright labor infighter themsleves. He's John Gaherin, former president of the Publishers Association of New York City, who was in charge of headaches -- generally known as negotiating with the big city's newspaper unions. So, now on the mounds are Marv Miller of Pittsburgh and Jack Gaherin of the owners' player relations committee.

Gaherin won't find Miller any less adept at pitching curves in this field. This has become razor sharp since the restricted distribution of a seven-page Statement of Policy by the Players Assn. "to be used as a guide in the forthcoming negotiations with the Major League Clubs."

Buried in the virtually unreported statement is the signal for the Executive Board's big pitch. For it says that, against the increase in ticket prices, the higher take in TV royalties, and the ever-rocketing game attendance, "it is difficult to be modest in making proposals."

After a considerable listing of immediate demands during this current negotiatio s season, the players say that they "look for an appropriate resolution of this problem in the immediate future."

Translate this into a set of demands in "rubber, steel, auto," and you have a discussion of speed of production of the product, in this case the ball game.

The players want in on what affects their daily living, their appearances, their travel, even on the length of the ball season. And they want to see that schedule a week before the World Series games so they can bargain on the upcoming season.

They don't, for example, want day doubleheaders following a night game. Split doubleheaders should not be scheduled or rescheduled. "Twi-night" doubleheaders should not be scheduled or rescheduled just before a day game. Night games should not be scheduled or rescheduled on getaway dates if either club has a day game on the morrow in another city.

They want all games starting later than four o'clock to be considered night games. Low temperatures and high winds should be given more recognition in determining whether a game should be postponed and "minimum standards" should be adopted. There should be a day off for clubs traveling between cities in the Eastern Zone and those in the Western Zone. There should positively be no one-day stands. And no games should be played during the "three-day All Star Game Break."

They want the preliminary schedule for following seasons shown to the players' representatives about this time of the year.

They want a joint study committee established consisting of representatives of the Association and the Clubs "to review and discuss the merits and disadvantages of shortening the playing season."

This is the trail of the steel industry's Human Relations Committee developed by Marvin Miller and an erstwhile lawyer, Arthur Goldberg. Undoubtedly the ball players will live better during preseason training and the long haul to the World Series. Slowly the club owners will begin sitting with those many industrial executives who go to all those management seminars.

Yes, Virginia, there was a Babe Ruth.

for you, dear graduate
Now it is time,
I hear them call your name--
I see you gently smile
And light tomorrow's flame;
A torch that you must shield
Against fate's constant wind.
Its glow will ever lead
To pathways of a friend;
To wonderment of love
Or fame. . .Perhaps success;
To distant worlds unknown
In search of happiness.

for you, dear graduate
Now it is time,

I see you gently smile
And light tomorrow's flame;
A torch that you must shield
Against fate's constant wind.

To pathways of a friend;
To wonderment of love
Or fame. . .Perhaps success;
To distant worlds unknown
In search of happiness.

Walk proudly down life's aisle--
Tomorrow quietly waits. . . .
Lend it your bravest smile.

Bulldogs Tangle With Winless Indians

Winless Kennett will visit at public school stadium for a 7:30 p.m. foo ball game tonight and a northern conference tilt with the undefeated Sikeston Bulldogs.

Sikeston goes into tonight's action with hopes of improving upon its 20-20 tie with the Indians on a rain soaked Indian field last year. The Bulldogs tied the score in the last minute and half of play and missed the extra point for the victory.

Kennett comes into tonight's battle with no victory wounds and many defeat scars. The Indians have been ailing since dropping their season opener to Malden 6-0 and collecting injuries at Poplar Bluff two weeks ago.

Coach Roy Nelson's Kennett squad is young and inexperienced and are apt to explode with a flurry of scoring punch. Although they are light they are quick and agile.

Kennett has scored only 26 points in its first three outings, 20 coming in last week's loss to Jackson. They are the only northern division team, who has yet to win a game. They have yielded 56 points, tops in the south. They have been victims of long scoring drives.

They are better than their record indicates and with the return of injured Greg Buys, their all-conference defensive and offensive star of 1966 to the lineup, they will have a better shot at strong defensive Bulldogs.

Sikeston has had only one big injury so far this season. That was in its opening game against Chaffee when a defensive starter broke an ankle.

Coach Bill Sapp's crew has been missing key players during practice this week due to illness. Star quarterback Bruce Farris was among them.

In the words of Kennett coach Nelson:

"The Bulldogs defense is better than that of last year and the swifty backfield poses a big problem for my Indians."

Kennett has a reputation for striking early in the game and letting up as it progresses.

According to the northern division statistics, Sikeston is second in yielding scores behind the powerful and strong Poplar Bluff crew. The Bulldogs have given up only 14 points all season and have shut out two of their first three opponents.

Coach Sapp's starting crew will most likely be the same as in last Friday's game against Charleston. Five juniors and six seniors will start on offense. One sophomore, four juniors and six seniors will begin on defense.

Nelson's crew will be headed by junior Signal Caller Ed McKinney, and completed by three other juniors and seven seniors.

Sports Corner

By RON JAYNES

The going is getting tougher as the season progresses and as the teams move into their fourth week of action tonight. . .We see a few surprises as the north winds bring to the area their first real football weather of the season.

Fans can check in their raincoats, which had been put to use in the three previous weeks, and check out their gloves, scarfs and winter coats because the weather man says. . .Its going to be Coooool . . . .tonight.

Now. . .as we get set to call tonight's action. . . We'll take our leisure time and try for a perfect night after hitting six of eight last week.

Here's how it shapes up from here. . .

Kirkwood at Cape Girardeau -- It'll be interesting to see how the Tiger's defense fares against the aerial attack of Kirkwood. . . Cape is undefeated and got a mental lift as well as its third win of the season last week when it tripped up Kentucky's eighth ranked Mayfield Cardinals. Cape is full of surprises and is keying up for its Oct. 13 encounter with Poplar Bluff. Cape 21, Kirkwood 13.

Perryville at Charleston -- The Pirates will engage their own aerial attack against the Bluejays in a top northern division battle at Bluejay stadium tonight. Charleston will find the going though against the Pirate secondary and come out on the losing end. Perryville 14, Charleston 7.

Poplar Bluff at Jackson -- Coach Jim Lohr's Mules will chase their 18th victory of the season around the Indian turf in this northern division battle tonight. It's about time for John Brown to break loose and there's not better time than tonight. John Brown 18 plus Ben Wyatt 3, Jackson 7.

Kennett at Sikeston -- It's going to be a Dennis Snelling night at public school stadium. . .Watch the Indians try and catch Mr. Half Blur and the Bulldogs. The Indians will have to wait awhile for their first win. Tonight's game belongs to the revenge minded Bulldogs, who hope to improve on their 20-20 deadlock at Indian field last year. Sikeston 35, Kennett 13.

Malden at Caruthersville--A must victory for both squads. . . if they hope to stay in the running for the southern division conference crown. Maldens began to jell. . .so watch out. . . Tigers and southern foes. Malden 28, Caruthersville 12.

Chaffee at Ilmo - Scott City -- Another loss for the inexperienced ISC-Rams. Glenzy's regime is building. . .and this will be number two for the Red Devils. Chaffee 27, Ilmo-Scott City 0.

Dexter at Hayti -- The Bearcats are the surprise of the southern division and might get surprised tonight. . .This is our upset of the week. . .Hayti 21, Dexter 19.

East Prairie at Portageville -- If the Eagles are to show themselves. . .it'll be tonight. . . The Bulldogs will triumph . . .Portageville 44, East Prairie 18.

Gideon at Steele -- A real test for the Bulldogs. . .Steele. . . that is. Gideon is still high about winning its first home game in six seasons and might find itself on the wrong end tonight. . .But Steele is inexperienced and it's Gideon 13, Steele 6.

LAST WEEK'S RESULTS

Cape Central 14, Mayfield, Ky. 12
Sikeston 27, Charleston 0
Jackson 25, Kennett 20
Poplar Bluff 27, Perryville 7
Dexter 20, Caruthersville 16
Portageville 27, Chaffee 7
Hayti 12, East Prairie 2
Malden 39, Gideon 6

Weatherman Throws Rain Into AL Race

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The weatherman, throwing his delaying spitter at Detroit, has raised the distinct possibility that you or I will wind up pitching for the Tigers in their last game of the regular season.

The opening game of Detroit's last-ditch series with California was rained out Thursday night and now the Tigers— still in contention in the American League's up-tight pennant race — face a twi-night doubleheader today and single games Saturday and Sunday.

Joe Sparma was to pitch Thursday and, with Earl Wilson scheduled today and Mickey Lolich on Saturday. Sparma conceivably could have come back with two day's rest for the finale Sunday.

But with Sparma's turn moved up to today's first game, he's out of the picture after that. Denny McLain, who dislocated a couple of toes last week, says he's ready, but Manager Mayo Smith is skeptical. And that exhausts the list of Tiger starters.

The forecast in Detroit today, by the way, was for rain, setting up the intriguing possibility of consecutive doubleheaders on Saturday and Sunday. The Tigers can clinch at least a tie for the flag by sweeping the four-game set.

In the only other game involving the four pennant contenders tonight, Chicago is at home to Washington. The White Sox are right down at the end of the stick; one more defeat and their chances of even tying for the pennant are gone.

Minnesota, in first place by a game, and Boston, tied with Detroit for second, get a second straight day of rest before opening their climactic two-game set in Boston Saturday.

There was baseball action Thursday, all in the National League where Philadelphia edged San Francisco 2-1, Cincinnati swept a doubleheader from Atlanta 8-0 and 9-1 and Los Angeles beat New York 3-0. St. Louis and Chicago were rained out.

Reliever Dick Farrell got Willie Mays to ground into a double play with the bases loaded in the ninth, saving the Phillies' victory over the Giants.

Jim Maloney shut out the Braves on four hits in the opener, striking out 12, and Sammy Ellis scattered seven hits in the nightcap in the Reds' doubleheader victory.

Claude Osteen held the Mets to five hits and tripled in two runs to break a scoreless tie in the seventh inning.

Third Ranked Arkansas State Meets Golden Eagles Of Tenn. Tech

JONESBORO, Ark. -- Arkansas State University's Indians, rated No. 3 and No. 8 in this week's two wire service college division polls, will face their second challenge of the season Saturday night when they travel to Tennessee Tech to face an offensively potent Golden Eagle team. Game time will be 7:30 (CDT), and the game will be carried over the Indian Sports Network.

The Cookeville, Tenn., team has tallied 50 points in its first two encounters, losing a 31-28 scoring duel to Youngstown University in its opener, then coming from behind to nip Murray State 22-21 last week.

The Eagles led Murray 14-0 after one quarter as Tech's powerful ground game scored two quick touchdowns.

That ground attack is led by fullback Larry Schreiber, who gained 591 yards rushing last year, and halfback Joe Raleigh.

Raleigh, along with end David Hudson, are the primary passing targets of quarterback Dale Swain, who has done an outstanding job in the first season as a starting quarterback.

A-State was impressive in its opening victory over Western Michigan as it upset the major ranked Broncos, one of the best teams to ever appear on an Arkansas State University schedule, 21-8.

But the Indians' pass defense was spotty, allowing WMU to roll to more than 200 yards through the air and gain their only touchdown on a 50-yard completion.

However, the Tribe did come up with three timely interceptions, and recovered three fumbles to offset its mistakes.

The Indians' defense will again be led by linebackers Bill Bergey and Tommy Sain, who played well against the Broncos. Other starters will be ends Steve Puryear and Rick McBridge, tackles Clovis Swinney and Ken Bennett and nose guard Rodney Downs.

In the defensive secondary will be Pete Garris, a pleasant surprise at monster man last week, safety Dick Ritchey and halfbacks Orley Massena and Steve Strubble.

Offensively, the Tribe will go with the rugged running of fullback Steve Gankiewicz, who gained 163 yards rushing and scored all three TDs last week, and halfback Frank McGuigan, who carried only eight times but for a 5.3 yard per carry average.

End Gerald Jumper and halfback Benny Winford were the chief passing targets of quarterback Tim Keane against WMU, and they will receive help from tight end Virgil Peyton.

Ron Worthen, the 235-pound center who led the way for five consecutive quarterback sneaks to get the Indians out of precarious field position against WMU, will start at the midpoint of ASU's offensive line.

Starting guards will be Dennis Roberts and Dwaine Glenn and Jackie Smith and Mike Hinrichs will start at the tackle slots.

Kevin McClelland, who kicked nine times for a 36.8 yard average, will again try to keep the ball high enough to avoid a long punt return. His kicks were returned for a total of only 32 yards last week.

Placement kicker Mike Everett booted all three ASU extra points last week, and he will be used as a field goal kicker if the situation arises.

Undefeated Records On Line In Prep Action

The first real football weather of the year finds four undefeated teams going into their fourth games of the season tonight as area high school griders take to the field.

Poplar Bluff, Cape Girardeau Central and Sikeston have unblemished records in the northern division while Dexter, an upstart in the southern division, goes into tonight's action with a 3-0 mark.

Tonight's top southern attraction centers at Hayti, where the 3-0 Dexter Bearcats meet the 2-1 Hayti Indians. Another game of interest will be that in Caruthersville, where Malden visits. A loss by either team will lessen its chances of a conference title.

In the north, Poplar Bluff's visit at Jackson is top rated as is Perryville's game at Charleston. The Mules will work on their 18th consecutive victory over a three-year span and are rated the number one team in the state. Jackson's offense began rolling after an opening game defeat and has rolled up big victories over its last two opponents, including a rousing win over southern favorite Malden.

Not in the conference picture, Cape Central takes on the passing Kirkwood eleven at Houck stadium in Cape tonight.

Poplar Bluff's Moss Leads District Scorers

Besides the loyal Sikeston Bulldog football fans there was one area prepster glad to see the Charleston Bluejays shut out last week in the northern division battle on the Bluejay turf. That young man was Poplar Bluff's Leroy Moss.

Maybe he wasn't hoping for a shutout but surely he hoped that the Jays Everett Holly didn't score.

Moss and Holly were tied for the Southeast Missouri district scoring lead last week but Moss' 48-yard touchdown in the Mules 27-7 romp over the Perryville Pirates put him in the lead with six touchdowns in three games and 36 points.

Holly and Carl Barker of the southern divisions Malden Green Wave squad are tied for second with 30 points. Barker ran for three touchdowns in last week's 39 to 6 Green Wave victory over Gideon.

Perryville's Mike Gotto with eight extra points and two touchdowns is in fifth place in the northern division scoring race behind third place Poplar Bluff's All-State John Brown, who has four TD's for 24 points and Jackson's Ron Ashman, who has four TD's for 24.

Sixteen northern division players have scored in double figures. 14 have scored in double figures in the southern division.

Poplar Bluff's Ben Wyatt has booted 10 extra points to lead in that category over Sikeston's extra point specialist Webb Edwards; who has nine to his credit.

Perryville's Mike Gotto has eight extra points to make up the three top extra point men in the north.

The southern division extra point lead is held by Portageville's Fisher who has seven, followed by Caruthersville's Larry Fisher, who has four.

No field goals have been registered as the teams move into their fourth week of action tonight.

Bulldogs Tangle With Winless Indians

Winless Kennett will visit at public school stadium for a 7:30 p.m. football game tonight and a northern conference tilt with the undefeated Sikeston Bulldogs.

Sikeston goes into tonight's action with hopes of improving upon its 20-20 tie with the Indians on a rain soaked Indian field last year. The Bulldogs tied the score in the last minute and half of play and missed the extra point for the victory.

Kennett comes into tonight's battle with no victory wounds and many defeat scars. The Indians have been ailing since dropping their season opener to Malden 6-0 and collecting injuries at Poplar Bluff two weeks ago.

Coach Roy Nelson's Kennett squad is young and inexperienced and are apt to explode with a flurry of scoring punch. Although they are light they are quick and agile.

Kennett has scored only 26 points in its first three outings, 20 coming in last week's loss to Jackson. They are the only northern division team, who has yet to win a game. They have yielded 56 points, tops in the south. They have been victims of long scoring drives.

They are better than their record indicates and with the return of injured Greg Buys, their all-conference defensive and offensive star of 1966 to the lineup, they will have a better shot at strong defensive Bulldogs.

Sikeston has had only one big injury so far this season. That was in its opening game against Chaffee when a defensive starter broke an ankle.

Coach Bill Sapp's crew has been missing key players during practice this week due to illness. star quarterback Bruce Farris was among them.

In the words of Kennett coach Nelson:

"The Bulldogs defense is better than that of last year and the swifty backfield poses a big problem for my Indians."

Kennett has a reputation for striking early in the game and letting up as it progresses.

According to the northern division statistics, Sikeston is second in yielding scores behind the powerful and strong Poplar Bluff crew. The Bulldogs have given up only 14 points all season and have shut out two of their first three opponents.

Coach Sapp's starting crew will most likely be the same as in last Friday's game against Charleston. Five juniors and six seniors will start on offense. One sophomore, four juniors and six seniors will begin on defense.

Nelson's crew will be headed by junior Signal Caller Ed McKinney, and completed by three other juniors and seven seniors.

Sports Corner

By RON JAYNES

The going is getting tougher as the season progresses and as the teams move into their fourth week of action tonight. . .We see a few surprises as the north winds bring to the area their first real football weather of the season.

Fans can check in their raincoats, which had been put to use in the three previous weeks, and check out their gloves, scarfs and winter coats because the weather man says. . .Its going to be Coooool . . . tonight.

Now. . .as we get set to call tonight's action. . . We'll take our leisure time and try for a perfect night after hitting six of eight last week.

Here's how it shapes up from here. . .

Kirkwood at Cape Girardeau -- It'll be interesting to see how the Tiger's defense fares against the aerial attack of Kirkwood. . . Cape is undefeated and got a mental lift as well as its third win of the season last week when it tripped up Kentucky's eighth ranked Mayfield Cardinals. Cape is full of surprises and is keying up for its Oct. 13 encounter with Poplar Bluff. Cape 21, Kirkwood 13.

Perryville at Charleston -- The Pirates will engage their own aerial attack against the Bluejays in a top northern division battle at Bluejay stadium tonight. Charleston will find the going though against the Pirate secondary and come out on the losing end. Perryville 14, Charleston 7.

Poplar Bluff at Jackson -- Coach Jim Lohr's Mules will chase their 18th victory of the season around the Indian turf in this northern division battle tonight. It's about time for John Brown to break loose and there's not better time than tonight. John Brown 18 plus Ben Wyatt 3, Jackson 7.

Kennett at Sikeston -- It's going to be a Dennis Snelling night at public school stadium. . .Watch the Indians try and catch Mr. Half Blur and the Bulldogs. The Indians will have to wait awhile for their first win. Tonight's game belongs to the revenge minded Bulldogs, who hope to improve on their 20-20 deadlock at Indian field last year. Sikeston 35, Kennett 13.

Malden at Caruthersville -- A must victory for both squads. . . if they hope to stay in the running for the southern division conference crown. Maldens began to jell. . .so watch out. . . Tigers and southern foes. Malden 28, Caruthersville 12.

Chaffee at Illmo - Scott City -- Another loss for the inexperienced ISC-Rams. Glenzy's regime is building. . .and this will be number two for the Red Devils. Chaffee 27, Illmo-Scott City 0.

Dexter at Hayti -- The Bearcats are the surprise of the southern division and might get surprised tonight. . .This is our upset of the week. . .Hayti 21, Dexter 19.

East Prairie at Portageville -- If the Eagles are to show themselves. . .it'll be tonight. . . The Bulldogs will triumph . . .Portageville 44, East Prairie 18.

Gideon at Steele -- A real test for the Bulldogs. . .Steele. . . that is. Gideon is still high about winning its first home game in six seasons and might find itself on the wrong end tonight. . .But Steele is inexperienced and it's Gideon 13, Steele 6.

LAST WEEK'S RESULTS

Cape Central 14, Mayfield, Ky. 12
Sikeston 27, Charleston 0
Jackson 25, Kennett 20
Poplar Bluff 27, Perryville 7
Dexter 20, Caruthersville 16
Portageville 27, Chaffee 7
Hayti 12, East Prairie 2
Malden 39, Gideon 6

Weatherman Throws Rain Into AL Race

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The weatherman, throwing his delaying spitter at Detroit, has raised the distinct possibility that you or I will wind up pitching for the Tigers in their last game of the regular season.

The opening game of Detroit's last-ditch series with California was rained out Thursday night and now the Tigers -- still in contention in the American League's up-tight pennant race -- face a twi-night doubleheader today and single games Saturday and Sunday.

Joe Sparma was to pitch Thursday and, with Earl Wilson scheduled today and Mickey Lolich on Saturday. Sparma conceivably could have come back with two day's rest for the finale Sunday.

But with Sparma's turn moved up to today's first game, he's out of the picture after that. Denny McLain, who dislocated a couple of toes last week, says he's ready, but Manager Mayo Smith is skeptical. And that exhausts the list of Tiger starters.

The forecast in Detroit today, by the way, was for rain, setting up the intriguing possibility of consecutive doubleheaders on Saturday and Sunday. The Tigers can clinch at least a tie for the flag by sweeping the four-game set.

In the only other game involving the four pennant contenders tonight, Chicago is at home to Washington. The White Sox are right down at the end of the stick; one more defeat and their chances of even tying for the pennant are gone.

Minnesota, in first place by a game, and Boston, tied with Detroit for second, get a second straight day of rest before opening their climactic two-game set in Boston Saturday.

There was baseball action Thursday, all in the National League where Philadelphia edged San Francisco 2-1, Cincinnati swept a doubleheader from Atlanta 8-0 and 9-1 and Los Angeles beat New York 3-0. St. Louis and Chicago were rained out.

Reliever Dick Farrell got Willie Mays to ground into a double play with the bases loaded in the ninth, saving the Phillies' victory over the Giants.

Jim Maloney shut out the Braves on four hits in the opener, striking out 12, and Sammy Ellis scattered seven hits in the nightcap in the Reds' doubleheader victory.

Claude Osteen held the Mets to five hits and tripled in two runs to break a scoreless tie in the seventh inning.

Adult Movies Keeping TV Censors Busy

NEW YORK (AP) — The current popularity of feature films shown six nights a week on the television networks is easy to understand while they are all loading in their most attractive movies with the most powerful star names to lure audiences.

In just the past week we had on tap Peter Sellers and David Niven in a farce, "The Pink Panther;" "Mutiny on the Bounty;" a Jerry Lewis comedy; another comedy with Paul Newman and Joanne Woodward and, Thursday night, Tennessee Williams' "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" with Elizabeth Taylor.

All this may be great for the home audiences, but a large number of the fairly recent films turned over to television in those multimillion-dollar packages were made for the "adult audiences." Some are so adult-oriented that they give the network censors some troubled moments.

"Never on Sunday," a hit to be run this weekend, has a central character who is a prostitute. It was run and rerun at the network, and in the end a few minutes of film was snipped out, in the interests of good taste and to forestall complaints about excessive sex and nudity.

"We try to edit out material which is offensive," said one network censor. "We're not afraid of any mature themes or strong drama if they are well handled. We don't even mind strong language if it is necessary. But where it is a matter of simple good taste, we try to do something."

The networks do get mail complaints about such matters, however, most comes from adults who say they were embarrassed by a show while watching it with a youngster.

Many writers who move between movies and television find there is much more freedom in films and two of them, Bill Persky and Sam Denoff, formerly "Dick Van Dyke Show" writers and now producers of "Good Morning World," say that the network censors operate on "a double standard."

All three networks deny it.

Oil Painting Courses Offered in Bootheel

CARUTHERSVILLE — Two oil painting courses will be given starting Oct. 10 according to John E. Martin, director of the University of Missouri extension center, sponsor of the courses.

Basic oil painting, a course for the beginner, will be given at the Caruthersville high school Tuesday nights," Martin said.

Painting the portrait, a more advanced course, will provide an opportunity for artists in this area to study and under John S. Weller, associate professor of art at the University of Missouri. This course will be held at the Kennett high school each Tuesday night starting Oct. 10.

Both courses will meet for two hours per night for six weeks if a minimum number enroll by Oct. 5.

Enrollment blanks may be secured by phoning or visiting the University Extension Center in Kenett, TU 8-4722 or in Caruthersville ED 3-0258. Other courses being offered include investments, growth and guidance of the small child, and news photography.

English Canon Gains Approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Roman Catholic hierarchy in the United States has authorized an English translation of the Canon or central prayer of the Mass, beginning Oct. 22, thus eliminating Latin entirely from the audible part of the service.

Archbishop John F. Dearden of Detroit, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, announced the decision Thursday.

The Canon is the prayer of praise and thanksgiving that includes the words attributed to Jesus at the Last Supper.

Exclusively Latin Masses have almost vanished in this country although they are still permissible in some areas.

The newly authorized English version of the Canon was prepared by the International Committee on English in the Liturgy.

It eventually is expected to come into use throughout the English-speaking world.

This version is basically a direct translation of the Latin text but stresses simple phrases in contrast to the multiple and superlative adjectives found in the Latin.

For example, the opening words of the Canon, "clementissime Pater," literally meaning "most merciful Father," have been translated simply into "Father." The words "haec dona, haec munera, haec sancta sacrificia illibata," literally meaning "these gifts, these presents, these holy unspotted sacrifices" will be recited as "these gifts we offer you in sacrifice."

In addition, archaic words such as "thou" and "thee" will not appear in the English translation of the Canon. This is in line with English translations of other parts of the Mass designed to emphasize modern English usage.

Second Mental Health Clinic to Open in Bootheel

KENNETT — Tuesday will mark the beginning of the Bootheel's second mental health clinic. The clinic, which is to be held the first Tuesday of each month, will be located at the Pemiscot County Health Center under direction of Dr. Emmett F. Hoctor, Director of Outpatient Services for the Farmington State Hospital.

The clinic will place emphasis on children, but will include the same type of treatment and services available at the Kennett clinic. This includes services and treatment for discharged patients, new referrals by local and area physicians, and those who have been under the treatment of private psychiatrists.

To attend the clinic, patients must be referred by their family physicians. The clinic will begin at 8 a.m., and patients will be seen on a first come, first served basis. The patient should bring to the clinic the referral slip from their family physician.

Mrs. Betty Hayden said she has chosen her volunteers for the first clinic to assist Dr. Hoctor. The volunteers visited the Kennett Clinic Sept. 18, to meet Dr. Hoctor and observe the clinic in progress.

The POWER of FAITH By WOODI ISHMAEL

Since 1957, Nicholas Royce has led a crusade for the recognition of Eastern Orthodoxy as a major religious force in the United States.

When he started his campaign, the denomination—fourth largest in this country—was excluded from many areas of public life. For example, there were no Eastern Orthodox chaplains in the military services, although the faith has about six million communicants.

Partly because of Royce's correspondence with political and industrial leaders, Eastern Orthodoxy may be on the way to full recognition. Legislatures of about half the states have passed resolutions officially designating the Eastern Orthodox church as a fourth major faith. Royce's dedication is showing results.

Vital Statistics... For Late Fall Heating

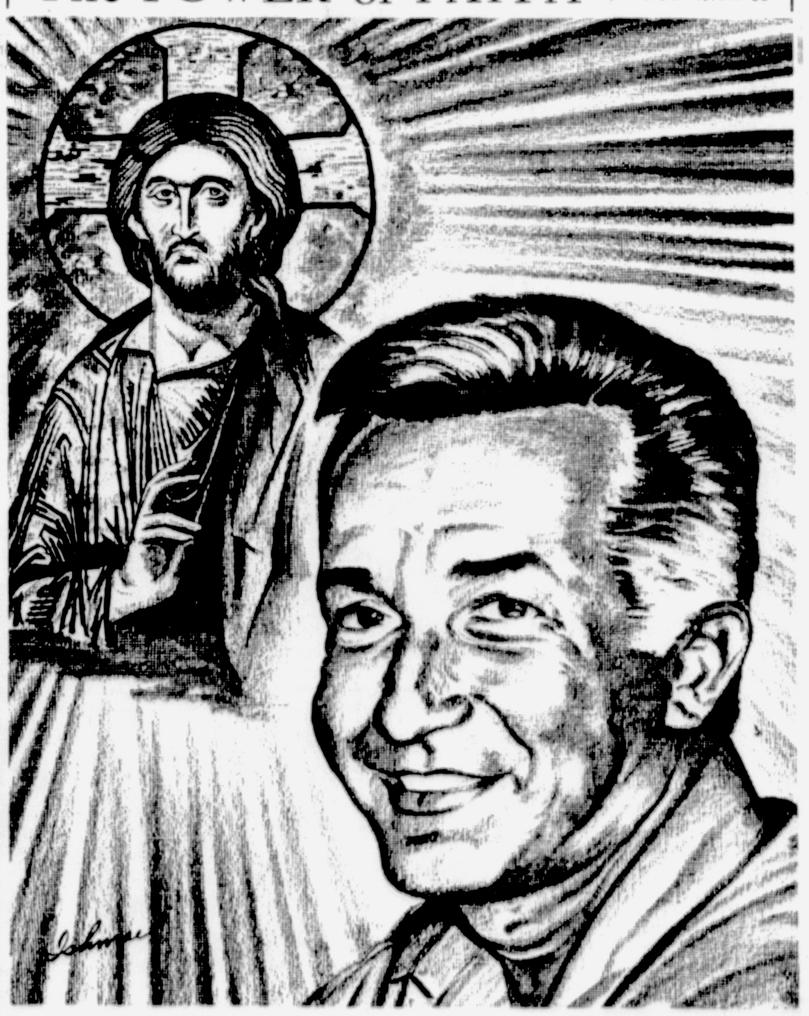
The POWER of FAITH By WOODI ISHMAEL



Since 1957, Nicholas Royce has led a crusade for the recognition of Eastern Orthodoxy as a major religious force in the United States.

When he started his campaign, the denomination—fourth largest in this country—was excluded from many areas of public life. For example, there were no Eastern Orthodox chaplains in the military services, although the faith has about six million communicants.

Partly because of Royce's correspondence with political and industrial leaders, Eastern Orthodoxy may be on the way to full recognition. Legislatures of about half the states have passed resolutions officially designating the Eastern Orthodox church as a fourth major faith. Royce's dedication is showing results.

For Late Fall Heating

Dear Mr. Blanton:

This morning I received a tear sheet of the picture page you ran on the 4-H club members from Southeast Missouri who attended the National 4-H Citizenship Short Course in Washington, D.C.

Thank you for giving this fine coverage to an outstanding group of young people.

I'm sure the 4-H club members appreciate this as well. A frequent complaint I hear from young people is the seemingly large amount of space given to a few teenage trouble makers, compared with space given to young people who stay out of trouble. They feel this negative emphasis gives all youth a bad reputation.

The coverage you give in your news columns and picture pages to the accomplishments of youth groups that are doing worthwhile things certainly helps point up the positive side of the situation.

Dear Charley:

Thank you for calling attention to the pinching of the little girls in Junior High School. I have a granddaughter blessed with a fair amount of space for pinching purposes who is going to Middle School for the first time this year. She has been instructed to haul off with her best dancing kick and let go with all her might and main to any one that molests her. If she manages to break a leg of the offender, it should be a very fine lesson in the hands off policy.

Dear Mr. Blanton:

R. C. Martin says:

WHAT ABOUT OUR MODERN EDUCATION?

Few of us I fear, realize the dreadful impact which is being made upon this generation, and indeed upon our posterity, as a result of the godless materialistic education which is being fed to the millions of the youth of America. It is impossible to develop a wise leadership by a system of learning which leaves God out. There is no wisdom in education which ignors Jesus Christ. The moral breakdown and the spiritual apost__y so much in evidence in contemporary life can largely be attributed to deliberately shutting God out of our modern educational program.

Your Republic will be pillaged and ravaged in the 20th century just as the Roman Empire was by the barbarians of the 5th century. . . with this difference . . . that the devastators of the Roman Empire came from abroad, while your barbarians will be the people of your country, and the products of your own institutions.

We know full well that we are witnessing the fulfullment of this prophecy to a great extent, and the end is not yet. Dreadful and almost unspeakable is the tidal wave of juvenile delinquency which continues to blight the nation. The explanation of this mad phenomenon is simple. It is none other than the direct fruit of our godless teaching program including the so-called scheme of progressive education. The full and final payoff is still to come.

The modern "leave - God - out" education of our youth for this past generation has not merely resulted in a scourge of reckless crime, distruction of property, personal assault, and similar barbarious practice. It has numerous other outcroppings. It has produced a wave of sensualism and immorality which engulfs literally millions of young lives. These for the most part have not been fortified to live in this kind of a world by godly home instructions and association with Sunday school and church. Certainly they have had little or no help from the public schools.

This is not to say that all such youth who have been deprived of these blessings have gone wrong or are going wrong in a gross sort of way. Nevertheless, the number who have is infinitely to great.

Sincerely,
R. C. Martin - the voice of concern

Woman Clerk Shot For Refusing Bandit's Order to Disrobe

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP)— A bandit wounded a woman clerk in a holdup at a savings and loan office Thursday after she refused to disrobe as he ordered.

Officials of the Citizen's Loan and Savings Co. said the man escaped with more than $1,700.

The gunmen forced two executives of the firm into a vault, then ordered Mrs. Wilcoxson to undress in a rest room.

She said the man grabbed at her when she didn't disrobe. She recoiled and he shot at her. The man then walked out, after telling Mrs. Wilcoxson and the men to "stay put" for five minutes.

Churchmen Believe Phony Christian Era Has Had It

NEW YORK (AP) — "Nominal Christianity has had it."

That's the stark assessment of present-day church life voiced by a leading Methodist theologian, the Rev. Dr. Albert Outler. Others have sounded similar views.

They call for firmer commitment to basic doctrine and its demands, and they challenge what they consider a rash of lax departures from it to appeal to passing, modern outlooks.

"The time may have come for theology to be more concerned with the truth of the Christian faith than with courting the elusive modern man," says the Rev. Dr. William Hordern, a United Church of Canada scholar.

There also is a growing conclusion that the Church is entering a period when its character and makeup will require tougher dedication to its teaching, in an atmosphere of much disbelief.

"In the new era— and it has started already— phony Christians will be recognized as phony," Roman Catholic Archbishop Robert E. Lucey of San Antonio told a recent gathering there.

In this connection, two tendencies, cited as widespread problems in recent church life, have drawn increasing fire from various religious leaders:

— The casual apathy of many churchgoers toward doctrine and its implications for conduct. This indifference, and vagueness about specific belief, has been brought out in numerous studies.

— The recent splurge of novel, inconoclastic approaches to faith, often by some theologians themselves, such as the coiners of the "Death of God" label for the modern technological age.

Both approaches are producing a backlash, however, and also signs of a countertrend, resisting the casual, complacent type of churchmanship and the scaling down of doctrinal criteria.

Noting the flurry of assaults on classic Christian beliefs, the Rev. Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, general secretary of the World Council of Churches, told its central committee meeting in August on the island of Crete that the interdenominational body must stick to gospel standards.

"The ecumenical movement depends today as it has from its beginnings on the transcendent God made known in His Son, Jesus Christ our Lord," he declared.

Other influential churchmen, including Pope Paul VI, have spoken out increasingly lately against what they call a wave of superficial interpretations that have spread skepticism in the churches.

Patrick Cardinal O'Boyle, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Washington, says the modern "enemies of religion" usually are within it.

Dr. Outler, of Perkins School of Theology in Dallas, says churches have been indulging in "the dangerous game of theological roulette— of seeing who had the gravest doubts, the most audacious repudiations of historic Christian teaching, who could come the closest to atheism and not topple over."

These for the most part have not been fortified to live in this kind of a world by godly home instructions and association with Sunday school and church. Certainly they have had little or no help from the public schools.

This is not to say that all such youth who have been deprived of these blessings have gone wrong or are going wrong in a gross sort of way. Nevertheless, the number who have is infinitely to great.

Woman Clerk Shot For Refusing Bandit's Order to Disrobe

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP)— A bandit wounded a woman clerk in a holdup at a savings and loan office Thursday after she refused to disrobe as he ordered.

Officials of the Citizen's Loan and Savings Co. said the man escaped with more than $1,700.

The gunmen forced two executives of the firm into a vault, then ordered Mrs. Wilcoxson to undress in a rest room.

She said the man grabbed at her when she didn't disrobe. She recoiled and he shot at her. The man then walked out, after telling Mrs. Wilcoxson and the men to "stay put" for five minutes.

Churchmen Believe Phony Christian Era Has Had It

NEW YORK (AP) — "Nominal Christianity has had it."

That's the stark assessment of present-day church life voiced by a leading Methodist theologian, the Rev. Dr. Albert Outler. Others have sounded similar views.

They call for firmer commitment to basic doctrine and its demands, and they challenge what they consider a rash of lax departures from it to appeal to passing, modern outlooks.

"The time may have come for theology to be more concerned with the truth of the Christian faith than with courting the elusive modern man," says the Rev. Dr. William Hordern, a United Church of Canada scholar.

There also is a growing conclusion that the Church is entering a period when its character and makeup will require tougher dedication to its teaching, in an atmosphere of much disbelief.

"In the new era— and it has started already— phony Christians will be recognized as phony," Roman Catholic Archbishop Robert E. Lucey of San Antonio told a recent gathering there.

In this connection, two tendencies, cited as widespread problems in recent church life, have drawn increasing fire from various religious leaders:

— The casual apathy of many churchgoers toward doctrine and its implications for conduct. This indifference, and vagueness about specific belief, has been brought out in numerous studies.

— The recent splurge of novel, inconoclastic approaches to faith, often by some theologians themselves, such as the coiners of the "Death of God" label for the modern technological age.

Both approaches are producing a backlash, however, and also signs of a countertrend, resisting the casual, complacent type of churchmanship and the scaling down of doctrinal criteria.

Noting the flurry of assaults on classic Christian beliefs, the Rev. Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, general secretary of the World Council of Churches, told its central committee meeting in August on the island of Crete that the interdenominational body must stick to gospel standards.

"The ecumenical movement depends today as it has from its beginnings on the transcendent God made known in His Son, Jesus Christ our Lord," he declared.

Other influential churchmen, including Pope Paul VI, have spoken out increasingly lately against what they call a wave of superficial interpretations that have spread skepticism in the churches.

Patrick Cardinal O'Boyle, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Washington, says the modern "enemies of religion" usually are within it.

Dr. Outler, of Perkins School of Theology in Dallas, says churches have been indulging in "the dangerous game of theological roulette— of seeing who had the gravest doubts, the most audacious repudiations of historic Christian teaching, who could come the closest to atheism and not topple over."

School Spirit Is Essential To High School Students

WHAT IS SCHOOL SPIRIT?

Many people say it is cheering and supporting their team at games, but is that all it is? School spirit can be defined in various ways.

It can be shown by taking care of school property. If a student is proud of his school, he will uphold the rules and regulations of his school. This, too, is a sign of school spirit.

Of course, cheering at games shows school spirit, but so does honesty and sportsmanship. Dishonesty and bad sportsmanship put a bad reflection on the school. If students are fair and good sports, other individuals and schools will respect the school as well as the students.

Cooperating with the faculty plays a large part in obtaining school spirit. Having the ability to get along with teachers, not only helps the teacher get to know the student as a person, but also helps the relationship between student and teacher. If a student gets along with his teacher, it is much easier for him to learn.

Another essential phase of school spirit is the willingness to work in school. If a person wants to be a good student, he can. Teachers can also teach a student who wants to learn much better than one who doesn't.

Last, but not least, responsibility is an important factor of school spirit. A student must be responsible to achieve anything in school. Each person should share in the school's responsibilities and not leave them up to just a few students to handle.

If the students of Sikeston high school would put forth a little effort to practice all the various forms of school spirit, they would not only be bettering themselves, but their school as well.

Career Choice Should Be Product Of Deep Thought

CHOICE OF A CAREER for today's student is one of the most important decisions he will ever make because this will determine his place in society and the course of his life.

His choice should be the result of careful thought, consideration and research.

A student should not set his mind on one career and remain blind to all others. Opportunities in almost every field imaginable are available to capable people, and these occupational opportunities should not be bypassed.

They should be explored, examined and probed from every possible angle.

Various factors should be taken into consideration in selecting a career.

An ideal occupation woud be one that suited a student's personality and his interests, but other factors are just as important. Salary, working conditions, opportunity for advancement, and the amount of education or training needed for the job should be considered.

Type of position, the future, and opportunities to enter the field should be examined, along with such added benefits as pensions and retirement plans.

Determining element should be the fact that the student is interested in the position, enjoys the work, and wants to make a career of this type of vocation.

A student of today is engaged in a vast race for an affluent position in society.

His choice of a career is one of the first steps to be taken in the climb to the top, and it is one of the most important decisions he will ever have to make.

Mary Beth, Patti and Barbara displayed "open mouths" throughout the entire game, and they were chosen as the outstanding Red Peppers.

FBLA Competes For $100 Prize In Float Contest

"Education Bridges the Gap" is the theme of the Sikeston Chapter of Future Business Leaders of America float to be displayed in the annual cotton carnival parade tomorrow morning.

Prehistoric time has been represented on one side of the float with a cave and men attacking a huge dinosaur with clubs and rocks.

Future Business Leaders will be competing in the school category for a prize of $100. The organization received honorable mention on its float last year in the parade.

The modern world is depicted on the other side of the bridge. A complex computer handling the problems of today helps give a hint of the future.

Following the call to attention, given by drum majors Susan Jobe and Jan Harper, the 155 marching members of the Sikeston band will move from all parts of the field into four large company fronts.

Another essential phase of school spirit is the willingness to work in school. If a person wants to be a good student, he can. Teachers can also teach a student who wants to learn much better than one who doesn't.

Last, but not least, responsibility is an important factor of school spirit. A student must be responsible to achieve anything in school. Each person should share in the school's responsibilities and not leave them up to just a few students to handle.

If the students of Sikeston high school would put forth a little effort to practice all the various forms of school spirit, they would not only be bettering themselves, but their school as well.

Career Choice Should Be Product Of Deep Thought

CHOICE OF A CAREER for today's student is one of the most important decisions he will ever make because this will determine his place in society and the course of his life.

His choice should be the result of careful thought, consideration and research.

A student should not set his mind on one career and remain blind to all others. Opportunities in almost every field imaginable are available to capable people, and these occupational opportunities should not be bypassed.

They should be explored, examined and probed from every possible angle.

Various factors should be taken into consideration in selecting a career.

An ideal occupation woud be one that suited a student's personality and his interests, but other factors are just as important. Salary, working conditions, opportunity for advancement, and the amount of education or training needed for the job should be considered.

Type of position, the future, and opportunities to enter the field should be examined, along with such added benefits as pensions and retirement plans.

Determining element should be the fact that the student is interested in the position, enjoys the work, and wants to make a career of this type of vocation.

A student of today is engaged in a vast race for an affluent position in society.

His choice of a career is one of the first steps to be taken in the climb to the top, and it is one of the most important decisions he will ever have to make.

Jobs Available For Math Pupils By Highway Dept.

High school graduates are being sought by the Missouri Highway Department for full-time employment.

Persons interested must have a strong math background, and algebra and geometry will be a minimum.

The training and work to be performed will be based on this math knowledge.

Applicants are being sought for the position of rodman. This job consists of assisting the surveyor, plotting of information obtained, care of equipment and other general office duties.

After a training and practical work period, rodmen may be promoted to the position of inspector. This product is the aim of the high school graduate program.

Starting salary for the position of rodman is $337 per month. Step-by-step advancements in salary are made on the basis of performance.

Dale Carney, director of the Southeast Missouri Department of Highways, stated that selection of applicants will be on the basis of a personal interview.

Mr. Carney emphasized the fact that the highway department is an equal opportunity employer; therefore, no discrimination of race, religion, or creed will be made in the selection.

In this field of work, there is a high turnover rate, and many appliicants are needed to fill the positions.

Mr. Carney felt that this job might be appealing to the person not able to attend college because of financial need or the person forced to drop out of college.

Persons interested in this position should make application to Dale Carney, Missouri Highway Department, Sikeston, Mo.

SHS Cheerleaders Choose Outstanding Red Peppers

Exuberant peppers openly displayed school spirit by clapping, yelling, stomping, waving pompons, and cheering the team on to its 27-0 victory over the Bluejays.

Mary Beth, Patti and Barbara displayed "open mouths" throughout the entire game, and they were chosen as the outstanding Red Peppers.

Teachers Enroll In College Class

Twenty-three teachers from Sikeston and the surrounding area are enrolled in mental hygiene, graduate course in education, that meets at 1:30 each Monday evening in the high school.

This course is offered by the Southeast Missouri State College, and it will be in session for the first semester of the college.

FBLA Competes For $100 Prize In Float Contest

"Education Bridges the Gap" is the theme of the Sikeston Chapter of Future Business Leaders of America float to be displayed in the annual cotton carnival parade tomorrow morning.

A bridge spanning a stream connecting two worlds will be in the center of the float.

Prehistoric time has been represented on one side of the float with a cave and men attacking a huge dinosaur with clubs and rocks.

Future Business Leaders will be competing in the school category for a prize of $100. The organization received honorable mention on its float last year in the parade.

The modern world is depicted on the other side of the bridge. A complex computer handling the problems of today helps give a hint of the future.

Marching Band Will Execute Step-Two Drill

Sikeston high school "marching Bulldogs," directed by Keith Collins, will present a salute to George M. Cohan tonight during the halftime of the Sikeston-Kennett football game.

Performing on the home field, the band will begin its show with the forming of a large block band formation. At the signal from the drum majors Susan Jobe and Jan Harper, the 155 marching members of the SHS band will move down the field to the strains of "The Band Played On."

Following the call to attention, given by drum majors Susan Jobe and Jan Harper, the 155 marching members of the Sikeston band will move from all parts of the field into four large company fronts.

After playing the fanfare from "The Spotlight on the Brass," the band will perform a precision drill to the straics of "Victor's March."

After moving to a giant SHS, the band will play the award-winning song "Born Free."

As a closing stunt, the band will return to block formation and leave the field playing "The Red and the Black."

To close the show, the SHS marchers will move to company fronts and leave the field playing "The Red and the Black."

Both the high school and the middle school band will march in the annual cotton carnival parade tomorrow morning.

It takes two to speak the truth -- one to speak, and another to hear.

FBLA Members Send Ditty Bags To U.S. Soldiers

Sikeston high school Future Business Leaders of America is promoting a ditty bag campaign for the Scott County servicemen in Vietnam.

Books, writing materials and games are to be placed in the bags. All paper items must be wrapped in plastic to keep the moisture away.

Articles must be turned in to sponsor Mrs. Rovena Hillsman, Mary Mack or Betty Powers by Wednesday, Oct. 11, to reach Vietnam by Christmas.

Members of the organization hope that the students will help them show the boys in Vietnam that they care.

Growler Sales Are Advancing, Orders Booming

"Sales are booming and the '68 Growler promises to be better than ever," said art editor Sheila Topp.

Natural colored end sheets in the front of the book will be the band in formation, and the football players, dressed in the red blazers, with the Red Pepper officers and cheerleaders will highlight the end sheets in the back.

Nominees for the Growler king and queen were elected in senior homerooms last week.

Nominees for king are Carl Barnett, Jim Bucher, Jim Carney, Bill Carr, Ed Felker, Mike Garner, Hank Lippert, Robert McCord, King Sidwell, Mike Thrower and Ed Cheek.

Aides Assist All Teachers In Many Ways

Eight Sikeston women are working in the Teacher-Aide Program of Sikeston high school that was incorporated into the school two years ago.

This program is aimed at helping the "under-achievers" in that it allows the teacher to devote his time to individual students' needs.

The aides average an eight-hour work day for the regular nine month school period.

Teacher aides assist with clerical work, bulletin boards, supervision, audio-visual equipment, as well as many other jobs that are beneficial to the teachers.

Sikeston high school aides work in specific departments. Mrs. DeWint Zaricor and Mrs. Deane Sprout work in the social studies department.

Serving as vocational department helper is Mrs. Ronald Lee.

Working with the English departments are Mrs. Spurlin Beck, Mrs. Clovis Lancaster and Mrs. Fred C. Davis.

Mrs. Huddleston is helping with the math, typing, science and business arithmetic classes.

All the teacher aides agreed that they enjoyed working and being back in the school's busy humdrum.

Scholarship Is Available For Athlete

This scholarship, amounting to approximately $100, will be given according to citizenship, need, athletic ability, academic excellence and acceptance at college.

Student who qualifies must meet the standards for citizenship of the Missouri State High School Activities Association and the Sikeston public schools.

He must also have a definite need for financial aid to attend the college of his choice.

Parents Should Protest about Bad Movies for Children to Theater Manager

Dear Ann Landers: What can a parent do these days to protect her youngsters against dirty movies that somehow get coupled with children's entertainment?

Yesterday I took my two youngsters to see Snow White. The kids had been looking forward to this delightful movie for weeks. I phoned in advance to learn if the second movie was O.K. for children. I was told, "Yes. It's a Western. The kids will love it." We arrived just as the second feature was starting.

We weren't in our seats five minutes when I thought I was hearing things. The leading character asked where he could find a "house of joy." A woman appeared in a dress cut down to her navel. She inquired as to whether he wanted a redhead or a blond. Before I could get the children down the stairs and out the door, a hussy in akimono turned up on the screen and asked if he would be more comfortable if he removed his wedding ring. My six-year-old asked, "Is the ring too tight, mommy?" and a half-dozen other questions which I had a hard time answering.

Now the kids are mad at me because they didn't get to see Snow White and I had to promise to bring them next week.

I feel sorry for parents who send their children to the matinee. They have no idea what those kids are looking at for a second feature. Please, Ann Landers, tell us what we can do to get two clean shows on the bill? --- BURNED UP MOTHER

Dear Burned: You apparently live near an exceptionally stupid theater manager. You should write him and tell him what you told me. And don't forget to let him know that you will not patronize his theater if he doesn't comply with your request.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 20-year - old boy who needs your advice. The trouble is my parents. Mom has a terrible temper and a will of iron. She thinks she is always right and will talk for five hours straight to prove a point. Dad is not an alcoholic but he hits the bottle when Mom gets on his back, and she gets on his back about five nights a week.

I am living with my aunt on the other side of town because her apartment is near my job. In a couple of weeks I have to go back to school and this means I must return to my parents' home. I dread the yelling and the fighting. It is darned near impossible to study in the house. Also, a good night's sleep is out of the question. Please tell me what to do. --- HEADACHESVILLE

Dear H: You don't say where school is in relation to your aunt's apartment. If it is possible to remain with your aunt, do so. But do keep in touch with your parents by phone and see them on weekends so they will not feel neglected.

Dear Ann Landers: I did not agree with your advice to the woman who is six years older than her husband. You advised her to admit it, get a passport and take that trip to Europe with him.

I am in exactly the same spot and I'd rather die than let my husband know my true age. I believe in the old adage, "Confession may be good for the soul but it's awfully hard on the reputation."

Any answer? Or do you choose to duck this one?--- FREE THINKING WOMAN.

Dear Woman: Your brand of free thinking can be pretty expensive. Somewhere in this world there's a relative, a neighbor, a schoolmate -- someone who knows your true age. The truth WILL come out one day and you're going to wind up looking like a rather old liar.

Too many couples go from matrimony to acrimony. Don't let your marriage flop before it gets started. Send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Marriage -- What To Expect." Send your request to Ann Landers in care of your newspaper enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self - addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self - addressed, stamped envelope.

If You Were The Judge

Sheriff Can Call out Men But Not Horses

Sheriff Dead-Eye was galloping after a wanted desperado when his horse suddenly decided it was too hot to go chasing after criminals. Settling down under a spreading chestnut tree, it became readily apparent to Dead-Eye that his horse had given up the chase. Hurrying over to Elmer's nearby Corral, Dead-Eye continued the pursuit on one of Elmer's more public spirited horses. While he never did catch up to the desperado, Elmer did catch up to Sheriff Dead-Eye and sued him for stealing his horse.

"I don't care who he was chasing," Elmer told the judge. "He had no right to take my horse without my permission."

"I sure did," was Dead-Eye's answer. "After all, I'm the sheriff. I have a right to call up a posse. And, if I can call up a horse and rider, I certainly can call up a horse without a rider."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make Sheriff Dead-Eye pay Elmer for commandeering the latter's horse?

This is how the judge ruled: Yes! The judge held that a sheriff is required to furnish his own horse. That while he has the authority to call out men for a posse, he has no right to call out just their horses.

(Based upon an 1897 Wisconsin Supreme Court Decision)

TODAY'S LEGAL POINTER:

While parents can make provisions in a separation agreement for their children, they generally don't mean a hill of beans if a court should decide that those provisions are not in the best interests of the children.

Parents Should Protest about Bad Movies for Children to Theater Manager

Dear Ann Landers: What can a parent do these days to protect her youngsters against dirty movies that somehow get coupled with children's entertainment?

Yesterday I took my two youngsters to see Snow White. The kids had been looking forward to this delightful movie for weeks. I phoned in advance to learn if the second movie was O.K. for children. I was told, "Yes. It's a Western. The kids will love it." We arrived just as the second feature was starting.

We weren't in our seats five minutes when I thought I was hearing things. The leading character asked where he could find a "house of joy." A woman appeared in a dress cut down to her navel. She inquired as to whether he wanted a redhead or a blond. Before I could get the children down the stairs and out the door, a hussy in akimono turned up on the screen and asked if he would be more comfortable if he removed his wedding ring. My six-year-old asked, "Is the ring too tight, mommy?" and a half-dozen other questions which I had a hard time answering.

Now the kids are mad at me because they didn't get to see Snow White and I had to promise to bring them next week.

I feel sorry for parents who send their children to the matinee. They have no idea what those kids are looking at for a second feature. Please, Ann Landers, tell us what we can do to get two clean shows on the bill? --- BURNED UP MOTHER

Dear Burned: You apparently live near an exceptionally stupid theater manager. You should write him and tell him what you told me. And don't forget to let him know that you will not patronize his theater if he doesn't comply with your request.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 20-year - old boy who needs your advice. The trouble is my parents. Mom has a terrible temper and a will of iron. She thinks she is always right and will talk for five hours straight to prove a point. Dad is not an alcoholic but he hits the bottle when Mom gets on his back, and she gets on his back about five nights a week.

I am living with my aunt on the other side of town because her apartment is near my job. In a couple of weeks I have to go back to school and this means I must return to my parents' home. I dread the yelling and the fighting. It is darned near impossible to study in the house. Also, a good night's sleep is out of the question. Please tell me what to do. --- HEADACHESVILLE

Dear H: You don't say where school is in relation to your aunt's apartment. If it is possible to remain with your aunt, do so. But do keep in touch with your parents by phone and see them on weekends so they will not feel neglected.

Dear Ann Landers: I did not agree with your advice to the woman who is six years older than her husband. You advised her to admit it, get a passport and take that trip to Europe with him.

I am in exactly the same spot and I'd rather die than let my husband know my true age. I believe in the old adage, "Confession may be good for the soul but it's awfully hard on the reputation."

Any answer? Or do you choose to duck this one?--- FREE THINKING WOMAN.

Dear Woman: Your brand of free thinking can be pretty e pensive. Somewhere in this world there's a relative, a neighbor, a schoolmate -- someone who knows your true age. The truth WILL come out one day and you're going to wind up looking like a rather old liar.

Too many couples go from matrimony to acrimony. Don' let your marriage flop befor it gets started. Send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Marriage -- What To Expect." Send your request to Ann Landers in care of your newspaper enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self - addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self - addressed, stamped envelope.

If You Were The Judge

Sheriff Can Call out Men But Not Horses

Sheriff Dead-Eye was galloping after a wanted desperado when his horse suddenly decided it was too hot to go chasing after criminals. Settling down under a spreading chestnut tree, it became readily apparent to Dead-Eye that his horse had given up the chase. Hurrying over to Elmer's nearby Corral, Dead-Eye continued the pursuit on one of Elmer's more public spirited horses. While he never did catch up to the desperado, Elmer did catch up to Sheriff Dead-Eye and sued him for stealing his horse.

"I don't care who he was chasing," Elmer told the judge. "He had no right to take my horse without my permission."

"I sure did," was Dead-Eye's answer. "After all, I'm the sheriff. I have a right to call up a posse. And, if I can call up a horse and rider, I certainly can call up a horse without a rider."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make Sheriff Dead-Eye pay Elmer for commandeering the latter's horse?

This is how the judge ruled: Yes! The judge held that a sheriff is required to furnish his own horse. That while he has the authority to call out men for a posse, he has no right to call out just their horses.

TODAY'S LEGAL POINTER:

While parents can make provisions in a separation agreement for their children, they generally don't mean a hill of beans if a court should decide that those provisions are not in the best interests of the children.

Remap Dispute Foes Find Point Of Agreement

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Agreement was reached Tuesday among opponents in a legal battle over Missouri's congressional redistricting law to seek appropriate population figures relating to the districts.

The 1967 law, passed by the state legislature, was challenged by attorney Paul W. Preisler of St. Louis on grounds that it did not reflect true population figures.

Preisler contended there were several inaccuracies in the population of the 10 districts. He said that the total population shown by the Legislature's plan was more than 1,200 less than the official figures on the 1960 census. Courts require redistricting to be based on the last 10-year census.

In Tuesday's hearing before Judge John W. Oliver of the U.S. District Court, Preisler said he would work with the state attorney general's office in establishing population figures he has questioned.

The attorney general's office has defended the plan.

Cable TV Offered Malden

MALDEN - Cable television service began in Malden this week, according to James Barnard of Cotton Hill Cablevision, Inc.

Barnard said that service men are now busy making hookups in homes of subscribers. He said that hookups will be made on a first come, first served basis and that all subscribers should be receiving the service by Oct. 15.

"We expect some technical difficulties the first few weeks," Barnard said, "and we ask our customers to be patient with us until we can get the 'bugs' out."

Subscribers will be able to tune in six channels, FM raido music, and a weather channel. The six channels will represent all three major networks. They are Channel 12, CBS, Cape Girardeau; Channel 6, NBC, Paducah; Channel 8, ABC, Jonesborro; Channel 5, NBC; Memphis; Channel 13, ABC, Memphis; and Channel 2, ABC, St. Louis.

The weather channel will be on 24 hours each day. A TV camera will be focused on a weatherscope located in the building at the base of the tower. It will provide time, temperature, barometric pressure, humidity, wind direction and velocity, and rainfall for the previous 24 hours.

HERB E. Dedication Slated For New Embassy

SAIGON (AP) — The United States will dedicate its new, $2.6 million embassy, which is considered terrorist proof, in Saigon Friday.

Plans were begun only a few days after Viet Cong bombing of the old U.S. Embassy March 30, 1965, killed 22 persons— two of them Americans— and wounded almost 200.

Water System Wins Approval

MALDEN — A proposal to issue special obligation bonds of $600,000 for construction of a waterworks system was given overwhelming approval Tuesday by residents of the newly formed Public Water Supply district No. 1 of Dunklin county.

Voters of Cotton Hill and Union Township voted 402-3 to authorize the bonds which will be retired from revenue received from the sale of water to users in the district.

The money will be used for purchasing land, purchasing and constructing a system of waterworks, and purchasing equipment and supplies needed in the operation of the waterworks system. The waterworks system will serve rural areas of two townships.

Agent Says Youth Sacrifice Themselves Foolishly on Drugs

KANSAS CITY (AP) - Young people -- many of them from well-to-do families, are foolishly sacrificing themselves to defy laws against possession or use of marijuana, says a federal narcotics agent.

George J. O'Conner, district supevisor of the U. S. Bureau of Narcotics, told the Missouri Municipal League that most marijuana violators used to come from underprivileged families.

"But now we are faced with sons and daughters of middle and upper class, in the midst of a college career, willing to throw everything away to show their displeasure with the laws," said O'Connor.

He added anyone who uses marijuana finds it easy to take the next step and start using heroin.

"If one wants to be a martyr," said the drug agent, "I am sure there are more worthy causes. I have never seen anyone who was improved by the use of marijuana.

State Asked to Give New Life to Missouri Cities

KANSAS CITY -- Members of the Missouri Municipal League at their 33rd annual conference issued a declaration of needs of Missouri cities.

At the same time the league urged the governor and the general assembly to use their power to "give new life to the cities of Missouri," pointing out that the state's response to the critical needs of cities will determine the future of the state for decades to come.

The league also urged the favorable voter passage of a constitutional amendment which would lower majority voting requirements on general obligation and revenue bonds in Missouri.

Also backed was a plan for the reassessment of real property and a system of block grants to cities to make money available for general purposes instead of for specific projects.

Among the critical conditions highlighted in the league's needs statement were:

Unrest among many in the cities opportunity for training, jobs, housing, medical care and urban life benefits.

Adjacent states are making more progress in industrial and commercial development due to more flexible bond issue laws.

Metropolitan areas are without adequate highways to recreational areas within Missouri and to outstate centers of commerce with the present low gasoline tax inadequate to yield enough funds to provide a high-way system which will reduce the alarming death and injury rate.

The rising crime rate, attributable in part to obsolete police systems and antiquated systems of criminal and parole administration.

Numerous cities lack good, modern streets as found in adjacent state cities. Curbs, gutters are non - existent in many cities.

Low wage earner and unemployed lack access to decent medical, hospital and health care because counties and states have not assumed their obligations.

One hundred thousand children of the indignent face prospect of becoming a class of purposeless people, devoid of prospect or hope and unable to obtain job training.

Funds are inadequate for protection of public health; sanitary and storm sewer systems and sewage disposal plants are woefully inadequate.

Funds are lacking to maintain sufficient law enforcement officials and to pay adequate salaries.

Revenues based on local tax structures are inadequate and antiquated, limiting bonding capacities of cities for capital improvements and operating needs.

Among other positions approved by League members were:

Elimination of tangible personal property tax; more reasonable procedures for annexation and the broadening of powers for municipalities to license businesses and occupations.

The league offered assistance to the governor's advisory council on local government law in that group.s study to revise local government statutes and commended past efforts of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes and the air conservation commission in attempting to form a regional air shed pollution control agency for the St. Louis area.

The harp is one of the oldest of all instruments. There are carvings of harp players on Egyptian tombs, and a Sumerian harp of 2500 B.C. has been found in Iraq.

Senators Oppose F.H.A.Restriction

WASHINGTON -- Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo) have urged Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler to withdraw a Treasury department ruling, which restricts Farmers Home Administration assistance to water and sewer districts.

The ruling the senators refer to is one which prevents FHA from insuring loans for new or expanded water and sewer district facilities.

In recent letters to the Treasury Secretary, the Missouri Senators reported the growing concern throughout the state that the insured loan program, one of the most successful and popular of all designed to improve living conditions for rural and small town America, is to be abandoned in favor of a direct loan program, for which adequate funds have not yet been made available.

In the last fiscal year in Missouri alone, State Director J. E. Jose reported to the senators that the Farmers Home Administration made $7,422,000 in insured loans for water systems. This was in addition to $6,782,400 in direct loans and grants of $667,100 for this important work.

This year, in the face of increased demand for this type of loan and grant, the FHA in Missouri has been allocated only $3,500,000 for direct loans and $663,000 for grants. Because of the Treasury Department ruling, FHA can no longer make insured loans in Missouri, the Senators said.

They further pointed out that the amount available this year for construction of water supply systems is less than 30 percent of what was available last year.

"This drastic reduction comes at a time when the program was just getting well started. An ever-increasing number of areas in our state are applying for this type of assistance," Symington and Long said.

"In one area alone, between Kansas City and St. Joseph, this action by the Treasury Department will prevent 1,700 rural families from getting adequate water service.

"With the $70 million a day cost of the war in Vietnam, the people of Missouri can understand why it was decided to reduce the direct loan and grant programs, but they cannot understand this banning of insured loans," the senators stated.

A letter from the Treasury department explained the Secretary's support of the President's programs to provide Federal credit assistance to small communities, and recognized the difficulty small towns have in obtaining credit on reasonable terms for needed public facilities.

The department contends the principal beneficiaries of federal guarantees of tax-exempt obligations, such as water and sewer facility bonds, are the private purchasers of these bonds, and not the borrowing public bodies.

Treasury further stated that the benefit of the tax exemption accrues primarily to private investors in high income brackets, and that there is an unacceptable loss of Federal revenue when private lenders do not have to pay income tax on their interest earnings from tax-exempt public obligations.

Symington and Long, however, contend that the need in rural areas for modern, safe water and sewer systems should be the overriding consideration.

"The alleged cost of the insured - loan program in sacrifice of Federal revenue is not large enough to constitute a problem," they said.

The senators said they are studying the Treasury Department recommendations but will continue to urge reversal of the Department's ruling and a reinstatement of the insured loan program.

Interstate Highway Gaps Shrinking

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

From Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., and Canada to Tampa, Fla., from Greensboro, N.C. to Barstow, Calif., the word is out: Interstate is coming "in."

In bits and pieces stretched like broken chains from coast to coast and border to border, a checkerboard pattern of interstate highways are already criss-crossing the map.

Harried motorists plagued by narrow roads, numerous detours, stop signs and traffic lights may be in for smooth driving, sooner than they think.

The key, however, is money, especiallly federal money. Interstate costs are met 90 per cent by the U.S. Bureau of Public Roads and 10 per cent by the states.

Highway officials across the nation are willing to estimate target dates for completion of interstate highway stretches in their states, but each forecast has a monetary string attached.

If federal funds continue to be available, motorists may be able by early 1973 to drive the entire length of Interstate 75, from Sault Ste. Marie to Tampa, on a four-lane highway without a single stop sign, traffic light or intersection at grade.

And this trip could be just the beginning of a longer journey. At Sault Ste. Marie, Interstate 75 crosses the St. Mary's River on the International Bridge and joins the 5,000-mile-long Trans-Canada Highway, the world's longest paved highway.

One of the longest transcontinental routes, Interstate 40, which runs from Barstow to Greensboro, is not expected to be fully completed until 1973.

While long stretches of these and other interstates are finished and open, bottlenecks remain.

State Asked to Give New Life to Missouri Cities

KANSAS CITY -- Members of the Missouri Municipal League at their 33rd annual conference issued a declaration of needs of Missouri cities.

At the same time the league urged the governor and the general assembly to use their power to "give new life to the cities of Missouri," pointing out that the state's response to the critical needs of cities will determine the future of the state for decades to come.

The league also urged the favorable voter passage of a constitutional amendment which would lower majority voting requirements on general obligation and revenue bonds in Missouri.

Also backed was a plan for the reassessment of real property and a system of block grants to cities to make money available for general purposes instead of for specific projects.

Among the critical conditions highlighted in the league's needs statement were:

Unrest among many in the cities opportunity for training, jobs, housing, medical care and urban life benefits.

Adjacent states are making more progress in industrial and commercial development due to more flexible bond issue laws.

Metropolitan areas are without adequate highways to recreational areas within Missouri and to outstate centers of commerce with the present low gasoline tax inadequate to yield enough funds to provide a highway system which will reduce the alarming death and injury rate.

The rising crime rate, attributable in part to obsolete police systems and antiquated systems of criminal and parole administration.

Numerous cities lack good, modern streets as found in adjacent state cities. Curbs, gutters are non - existent in many cities.

Low wage earner and unemployed lack access to decent medical, hospital and health care because counties and states have not assumed their obligations.

One hundred thousand children of the indignent face prospect of becoming a class of purposeless people, devoid of prospect or hope and unable to obtain job training.

Funds are inadequate for protection of public health; sanitary and storm sewer systems and sewage disposal plants are woefully inadequate.

Funds are lacking to maintain sufficient law enforcement officials and to pay adequate salaries.

Revenues based on local tax structures are inadequate and antiquated, limiting bonding capacities of cities for capital improvements and operating needs.

Among other positions approved by League members were:

Elimination of tangible personal property tax; more reasonable procedures for annexation and the broadening of powers for municipalities to license businesses and occupations.

The league offered assistance to the governor's advisory council on local government law in that group.s study to revise local government statutes and commended past efforts of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes and the air conservation commission in attempting to form a regional air shed pollution control agency for the St. Louis area.

The harp is one of the oldest of all instruments. There are carvings of harp players on Egyptian tombs, and a Sumerian harp of 2500 B.C. has been found in Iraq.

Medicare Rate Decision May Be Delayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's elderly are supposed to find out by Oct. 1 whether the $3 a month they now pay for doctor-bill insurance under medicare will be increased for the coming two years, but the announcement may be delayed.

It was learned the administration is considering asking Congress to extend the date by which John W. Gardner, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, is required to announce the new rate.

Sources said department officials would like to see the date extended until Congress has completed action on medicare provisions in the Social Security bill— probably not until November.

Department officials say many pending medicare proposals could require a rate increase above whatever increase the department might now find necessary.

One proposal, now being hotly debated, would add the cost of prescription drugs to medicare benefits. Administration officials have said this would mean raising the rate by 50 cents to $1. The government contributes an equal amount.

Gardner said last week he is against adding drugs to medicare before he gets a final task force report on the issue next June 1.

The Social Security package, including medicare, has passed the House and now is in the Senate.

An "open enrollment" period of three months is supposed to begin Oct. 1 for elderly persons to join the voluntary doctor-bill insurance plan. But the period would have to be reopened if no extension were provided and the rate had to be changed because of congressional action.

Senators Oppose F.H.A.Restriction

WASHINGTON -- Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo) have urged Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler to withdraw a Treasury department ruling, which restricts Farmers Home Administration assistance to water and sewer districts.

The ruling the senators refer to is one which prevents FHA from insuring loans for new or expanded water and sewer district facilities.

Industrial Tax Case Studied by Supreme Court

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Missouri Supreme Court took under advisement the question of tax liability of a company leasing an industrial plant from a Missouri community.

Final arguments were presented in the case between the city of Annapolis, in Iron County, and the Ruberoid Co., a division of General Aniline and Film Corp.

At the outset the State Tax Commission held that the leasehold held by Ruberoid had no value for tax assessment purposes. But the Iron County Circuit Court overturned the commission's holding.

Ruberoid said besides its rental payments to the city it also agreed to pay Annapolis $7,000 to $8,000 a year as "additional rent" in lieu of taxes and to help the city build a municipal waterworks and sewage system.

The company produces roofing granules for final use in composition roofing.
